Need for the Rule(s): The American peregrine falcon was removed from the list of endangered species (OAR 635-100-0125) allowing legal take of this species for falconry. This amendment is needed to improve the capture permit process and to set particular conditions of the legal take of peregrine falcons for use by master falconers for this capture season.

Documents Relied Upon, and where they are available:

Biological Status Assessment for the American and Arctic Peregrine falcon in Oregon, ODFW April 2007. Final Environmental Assessment, Take of Raptors from the Wild under the Falconry Regulations and the Raptor Propagation Regulations, US Fish and Wildlife Service, June 2007.

The above document is available for public inspection at the Department of Fish and Wildlife, Wildlife Division, Third Floor, 3406 Cherry Ave N, Salem, OR 97303, between 8:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m., on normal working days, Monday through Friday.

How were small businesses involved in the development of this rule? N/A

Administrative Rule Advisory Committee consulted?: No

If not, why?:

The draft administrative rules were developed without a rule advisory committee. However department staff consulted the Oregon Falconry Association and Audubon Society of Portland. Correspondence from and testimony by interested and affected persons is accepted into record and is part of the rulemaking process

Copies of the draft administrative rules may be obtained from the Department of Fish and Wildlife, 30406 Cherry Ave NE, Salem, OR 97303.

Fiscal and Economic Impact Statement for the December 12, 2008
Hearing in the Matter of Rules Relating to the Capture of Peregrine Falcons for Use in Falconry

Fiscal and economic impact: Rule changes are being proposed to establish an allocation of available peregrine falcon take for use in the sport of falconry. These changes are due to the recent delisting of the peregrine falcon from the Oregon list of threatened and endangered species. The proposed rules will affect state agencies, units of local government, and the public, respectively, as discussed below:

A. The only state agencies that might be affected by adoption of these rules are the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife (ODFW) and the Oregon Department of Transportation (ODOT). No significant changes from the current levels of ODFW's operations or expenditures are expected as a result of the adoption of these rules. To the extent that collectors gather these birds from highway structures, ODOT might be affected.

B. No units of local government are expected to be affected by these rules. No significant changes from the current levels of any local agencies' operations or expenditures are expected as a result of the adoption of these rules.

C. The public could be affected by the adoption of these rules: Currently, there are about 40 individuals who carry falconry capture permits. Those who meet the definition of "master falconer" according to the Oregon Administrative Rules will be entitled to capture young peregrine falcons for use in falconry. Falconers are undertaking the activity as a recreational pursuit, instead of as a business pursuit. Therefore, there is no fiscal impact to the capture of these birds. There would be non-monetary benefit to those falconers from this chance to capture a new species.

Federal guidelines require that the peregrine falcon take be less than 5% of the productivity of the peregrine falcon population. According to existing population surveys, the proposed take of peregrine falcons will be well below this 5% figure, therefore not posing a threat to the recovering wild population of these birds or the non-monetary benefit the public derives from them.

Most businesses affected by these rules are believed to be "small business."

The rules are believed to be fully compatible with legislative direction on the goals of wildlife management in Oregon.

We do not believe that a less intrusive or less costly alternative adaptation to only small business is consistent with the purpose of the rule.
