Dear Curt:

I am writing in response to the Department's request for input regarding the present draft of the Rogue South Coast Multispecies Conservation and Management Plan (RSP). The Tribe wants to recognize ODFW for its efforts toward improving management of several stocks of coastal salmon and steelhead that are important to the Tribe and its members. We recognize the difficulty in developing a plan that covers as broad a set of resources as does the RSP. The Tribe commends the Department on thinking toward developing improved methods that will allow for better data collection and thus an improved ability to manage these valued resources in the future. The Tribe's staff were not able to dig deep into the details of the plan but felt the review conducted with ODFW staff (Chris Lorion and Dan Van Dyke) was informative and allowed our staff an adequate understanding of the goals and objectives of the RSP.

The Tribe is encouraged by ODFW's work to focus on climate change specific to water quantity, quality and access to habitat. These are especially important to the Tribe. We are encouraged by the progress your staff described they and their partners have made in restoration of water and stream flows across the greater Rogue Basin. This also applies to the work by the broader Rogue Basin partners working on restoring beaver across the basin.

Looking at the obligations associated with the Federal dams in the Rogue Basin we are encouraged by our understanding of the efforts to address straying of hatchery fish where it is affecting the resiliency of wild stocks. We are also hopeful those hatchery stocks that are in place as mitigation for the wild fish production, lost by the creation of the dams, will continue to be available for harvest by Tribal members who live in the broader Rogue Basin.

We are supportive of a continuation of a 'no harvest' rule for wild summer steelhead and coho stocks in the basin. We believe these stocks need more time to recover. We are encouraged by the proposed new harvest card requirement for wild winter steelhead and we would be encouraged by seeing a reduced allowable annual catch of wild winter steelhead until better data are available through the new harvest card. We understand ODFW's perspective on putting limited resources toward gathering new information covering smaller direct coastal basin steelhead stocks but hope those needs can be addressed in future efforts.

In conclusion, because we have lived, fished, hunted and gathered in the Rogue Basin since time immemorial we are especially hopeful ODFW can achieve those improvements in resource management targeted in the RSP.

Sincerely,

Subject: Rogue South Coast Conservation Management Plan

Good day,

I'm writing to thank you for all your hard work in protecting and conserving wild steelhead and salmon populations across Oregon. To continue this work, I believe it is imperative that mandatory catch-and-release regulations are put in place for wild steelhead in the Rogue South Coast Conservation Management Plan.

Steelhead populations are in decline across the Pacific Northwest. On many rivers, emergency closures have been put in place because of this fact. Wild steelhead hold the key to the species' survival and I believe it is absolutely necessary to immediately halt the recreational harvest of them. Until we have sustainable populations and also reliable and comprehensive data on the run size, we cannot be justified to let harvest continue.

Tough decisions are being made across the PNW to protect steelhead and Oregon MUST do the same. I believe that, if wild steelhead harvest is not eliminated, it will not be long before a recreational fishing season in general will be lost.

Thank you,
Jesse

To the ODFW Commission,

My name is Steven Scow. I am the owner of Steve Scow Fly Fishing, LLC. This is a small fly-fishing guide service located in Medford. I guide on the Upper Rogue River for summer and winter steelhead, in addition to trout.

I am writing today to ask all of you to adopt a no kill regulation for wild steelhead in the Rogue South Plan. I understand people on both sides of this issue are passionate and are no doubt in your ear about it. I would ask that the commission look at the current science and state of our steelhead throughout Oregon and the Pacific Northwest.

The last few years have been hard for steelhead. In 2021, ODFW had to take drastic measures and shut down steelhead fishing in the Deschutes, John Day, Umatilla, and Walla Walla Rivers. In the same press release ODFW stated "Passage counts of summer steelhead at Bonneville Dam from July 1 through Aug. 26 are the lowest since counts began in 1938. This continues a pattern of several years of low returns for many populations and comes during a period when flows throughout the basin are generally low because of drought. Within this run are ESA-listed wild summer steelhead destined for the Upper Columbia and Snake rivers, as well as several mid-Columbia tributaries."

While these rivers are in a different area of the state, it is important to look at the status of wild steelhead on the North Umpqua River which was also shut down due to high water temperatures and low return numbers. These closures, compounded by the current state of wild steelhead throughout the Pacific Northwest, show that the adoption of a no kill regulation is warranted for wild steelhead.

There are a number of people who make their living on the steelhead fishery. I am currently one of those. I understand there are folks who are going to say their livelihood will be ruined, the local economy will be wrecked, and all will be lost. I do not believe this to be the case. Regulations change all the time and people have continued to make a living. The people who pay me to take them fishing understand I will not allow a wild steelhead to be harvested. They still book a trip, travel to the area, stay in lodging, shop locally, and then come back to do it all again.

While the adoption of a no kill regulation is only a small drop in the bucket. It is a drop, nonetheless. It is still progress. The time for this regulation has long since passed. Wild steelhead populations are down and they continue to decline. Fish populations throughout the state and Pacific Northwest prove that. I ask again that you all look at the science and look at it objectively. Once these fish are gone, we will not be able to bring them back. Please adopt a no kill regulation for wild steelhead for the Rogue South Plan.

I appreciate your time in reading this and wish you all the best.

Respectfully,

Steven R. Scow.

I think if ODFW determines there is enough wild steelhead for the sportsman to harvest a couple then allow a harvest -- Period! I do not feel the Native fish big shots, tribes, guides. or other fish experts should have more say-so or influence than me, the silent majority. I want to believe ODFW has the experts to deal with the Steelhead and Salmon, God knows WE pay for it! Opinions are great, I have a few myself. but a small amount of organized people with lots of time and money should not dictate policy. Oregon will lose more fishermen and fishermens monies if this catch and release everything is not moderated

Greetings,

I have communicated previously on this matter, but as decision time approaches, I want to reiterate my support for mandatory catch and release for Rogue wild winter steelhead.

I appreciate your action in requesting staff to develop a C&R alternative in the plan. It is time to bite the proverbial bullet and make it happen. The absence of critical data for management makes it imperative that a conservative management approach be taken to secure the long term viability of this population. It is foolhardy to wait until the population is on the verge of extinction before taking responsible actions for their protection.

ODFW Wildlife Commission,

Greetings from Yamhill County.

I'm writing to you today to express my support for wild steelhead populations in the Northwest and here more locally in Oregon. I'm asking that you support catch-and-release regulations throughout the state for these miraculous creatures.

I'm a farmer, avid outdoorsman and the proud father of two young children. Like many of you, having children is an experience filled with humility, responsibility, and deep appreciation of one's mortality and fleeting time on this planet. While I've personally had the great honor of catch and releasing wild steelhead in many of our pristine Oregon streams, I'm fearful this same opportunity will not be available for my kiddos. That would be an incredible shame and legacy for us to leave behind. It would be breaking the inherent promise that all Oregonians should be rightfully imbued with at birth.

If I never have another opportunity to catch and release a wild steelhead in our streams- so be it. I've been fortunate to have had that near-religious experience several times and am grateful for that chance. But its up to all of us to leave that same legacy behind for subsequent generations- Wild Steelhead are an important mandate indeed.

Thank you for considering.

Subject: Release Wild Steelhead in Southern Oregon Rivers

To whom it may concern,

I'm writing you today as a fellow Oregonian to express my interest in changing angling regulations to require release of all wild steelhead in Southern Oregon rivers.

My name is Michael McLean, a graduate of Oregon State University, with a Bachelor of Science Degree specializing in Fisheries and Wildlife Management. I've been working as a guide in the sport fishing industry since 2005, and have held a guide license in Oregon, British Columbia, and Alaska. I hope you will give me credence, for fish and fishing is more than a passion for me, it's my livelihood.

To think this topic is even being debated is a shame. Numbers of wild steelhead throughout their historic range and distribution is dismal at best, even in the 'best' rivers. This year from Southern Oregon to Northern British Columbia we collectively saw the worst steelhead runs ever documented. This led to emergency closures to protect the few adults that did return. Hopefully, this is not news to you.

Knowing how fragile wild steelhead populations have become, and that many are teetering on the brink of extinction; how can ODFW, who have been tasked with 'managing' and protecting these valuable and vulnerable fish still allow them to be harvested?

Simply put: there is not sufficient data on the population dynamics of wild steelhead at different life stages in these Southern Oregon streams to know what impact allowing wild fish harvest will have on their populations. It seems ODFW may be flirting with disaster to allow continued harvest of wild steelhead.

Beyond not having enough evidence to support a wild steelhead harvest- doesn't it just seem wrong? Why is Southern Oregon the only area of the steelhead range that still allows for wild steelhead harvest? Seems a bit out dated and draconian. Considering most these streams already have hatcheries present, and the slough of negative impacts that hatcheries have been shown to have on wild populations; it seems that ODFW wants to kick wild steelhead stocks while they are down.

Changing angling regulations to require wild fish be released while further data is collected is the smartest and easiest move ODFW can make. If the goal at ODFW is truly 'to protect and enhance Oregon's fish and wildlife and their habitats for use and enjoyment by present and FUTURE generations' then this debate seems like the classic no-brainer.

You know I'm right. Do the right thing. Release and respect wild steelhead.

Sincerely,

Michael McLean

Subject: Concerns regarding the Rogue–South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan

Dear Commission Chair Mary Wahl,

I am writing to request that you reject the Rogue–South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan at your December 17, 2021 meeting. Serious deficiencies in the plan cannot be remedied prior to December 17.

The positive side of the plan would allow for 633,000 hatchery steelhead and coho salmon to be released into the Rogue and Chetco Rivers. This represents a huge commitment of resources and a major step forward.

However, the proposed Plan does not provide credible population and trend data for summer steelhead and coho salmon in the Applegate River basin tributaries and Middle Rogue tributaries. The Department failed to renew spawning summer steelhead counts and tributary coho salmon counts prior to, and during, Plan development. The Plan should be rejected until critical field data from tributaries has been collected.

In summary, I believe it would be prudent and responsible for the Commission to reject the Plan at the December meeting, until the Plan can be properly revised to fully protect all wild sport fish species in the Rogue, Applegate and Illinois river tributaries.

Thank you for the hard work done so far and for waiting to implement the best possible Conservation and Management Plan.

Sincerely,

Subject: Concerns regarding the Rogue–South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan

Dear Commission Chair Mary Wahl,

I am writing to ask you to reject the Rogue–South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan to protect the health of the fisheries of the Rogue River.

The process to develop the plan is seriously flawed and the Department failed to provide recent monitoring data to support the most critical decision parameters. I request the Commission reject the plan at the December 17 meeting. The deficiencies in the plan cannot be remedied prior to December 17.

This plan is seriously lacking in several elements that would ensure proper conservation management for species such as steelhead, coho salmon, cutthroat trout, and resident rainbow trout. Here are where we feel the plan is lacking:

1. Management of resident rainbow trout is incomplete because it fails to provide a reasonable range of options for hatchery fish release numbers for the Commission to independently review and make decisions on.
2. It failed to assess climate change impacts to hatchery fish.
3. The plan lacks critical adult tributary spawning data from the past.

The Plan fails to provide alternatives to substantially reduce the massive annual hatchery fish releases of 633 thousand coho salmon, winter steelhead and summer steelhead into the Rogue and Chetco Rivers during extreme environmental conditions. Climate change is contributing to deteriorating freshwater and ocean conditions so increasing hatchery fish numbers will increase unnecessary stress on native populations of salmonids. ODFW is ignoring the effects of climate change by seeking to increase hatchery fish production and distribution.

In summary, I believe it would be prudent and responsible for the Commission to reject the Plan at the December meeting until the Plan can be properly revised.

Subject: "Rogue South Coast Multi-species Conservation Management Plan, (RSP). Recommending Alternative 2 - Catch & Release of all wild winter steelhead in the Southern Region, Oregon.

Dear Chair Wahl, Commissioners, and Director Melcher:

I write representing the Northern California Council, Fly Fishers International, our 23 Fly Fishing Clubs in Northern California from Fresno to the Oregon Border, and all of Northern Nevada. We have approximately 7,000 club members in our region, and most of them fish in Oregon for trout, salmon & steelhead. Winter steelhead fishing in Southern Oregon is a most prized activity for many of our members, and multiple trips per year are common. In essence, fishing in Oregon is an important activity of our members and a staple of our annual activities, with winter steelhead the major focus of our members from December to March each year.

We are very concerned about the continued existence of winter steelhead in the Southern Oregon region. Those who have fished southern Oregon over the past 5+ years report a declining catch rate, even while spending more time fishing than in years past. The last 2 years have been the worst in memory, with many days spent and many trips ending in zero hook-ups. It is clear to us that something is wrong, and a change in management of these precious fish is needed if these fish are to survive and be viable in the years ahead.

We strongly recommend the Commission approve Alternative 2 - catch & release of all wild winter steelhead in the Southern Oregon Region. We do so for the following reasons:

- Catch and release for wild steelhead will not eliminate harvest opportunity; harvest of hatchery steelhead will still be available.
- 89% of wild harvest occurs in the Rogue and Chetco River's; both of these rivers have thousands of hatchery fish for harvest opportunities.
- No population estimates for adult steelhead for the middle and lower Rogue, Illinois, Applegate, or any south coast watersheds.
- No current estimate of harvest rate or overall mortality in Rogue or south coast. Idaho observes a 5% catch and release mortality rate and Washington uses an 10% catch and release mortality rate. Oregon does not observe a catch and release mortality rate nor is it included in this plan.

TM

FLY FISHERS INTERNATIONAL

Conserving - Restoring - Educating Through Fly Fishing

- Proposed monitoring does not commit to obtaining or using adult population estimates or escapement goals for Rogue or south coast.
- No Adult spawning surveys were conducted in the Rogue Basin this year.
- Catch and release will continue to allow opportunities to fish without closing down the sport fishery.
- Percent Hatchery Fish on Spawning Grounds is unknown (pHOS).
- Offsite hatchery releases are being proposed in the plan.

Over the past 5 years we have worked with the California Dept. of Fish & Wildlife to create a Fisheries Monitoring Plan on the Smith River. In that plan DIDSON sonar counting is being done to understand the annual influx of mature winter steelhead. We would suggest ODFW consider such an effort to create a better scientific understanding of the wild steelhead spawning populations and to use this data to help manage the fishery in a responsible way. Without good, reliable data the fishery cannot be managed responsibly, and knowing year after year the incoming spawning adult population can provide reliable data upon which good decision making can be based.

Thank you for the opportunity to make comment on the management of this important population of wild winter steelhead. Again, We support Alternative 2 - catch & release of all wild winter steelhead in the Southern Oregon region of Oregon.

Commission Comments

Rogue-South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan

Dec. 17, 2021

Weighing Public Comment and Input: Once again, the Commission finds itself confronted with considerable public comment on an impending action. One option is to count noses and go with the majority; the other is to consider where the comments come from, who is commenting and how those comments relate to plan before you. Over the years, I have observed similar conundrums for other Commissions and for myself in other forums. In my view, you have comments from customers, comments from constituents and comments from the public. By my definition, customers are those folks who are purchasing products or items from ODFW like licenses, tags, permits and who are participating in activities regulated by the Commission. These people and their activities are directly affected by your decisions. Constituents are the citizens of Oregon, whose wildlife you are charged with managing. Constituent involvement is largely casual and your decisions will not impact them directly. The public is everybody else. I expect you to give some deference to your customers, particularly those who are directly affected by your decision and where there is no biological rationale to limit their opportunity. The input you have received from your customers has largely been Plan specific. I will remind you that folks who write in, call in and message you from other states in response to a “call for action” to support the sanctity of catch and release are not your constituents and, in all but a few cases, are not your customers. And please remember, while the ODFW fisheries staff work for the people of Oregon, your customers pay for the programs that they administer. Customer satisfaction matters.

Trust the Plan: The Plan calls out specific triggers and actions. These are very specific and would result if contemporary data demonstrated that an adjustment to current regulations was warranted. Those adjustments are specifically described in the Plan. Your subject matter experts, the ODFW staff, have put before you a well written, thorough and innovative road map to guide current and future management of a number of species. Their efforts were guided by decades of experience with these resources and is tempered by the realities of unbiased data interpretation. Numbers presented on charts and graphs often do not accurately reflect the entire picture without professional interpretation. The folks who collected the data that generated the numbers are the best at deciphering their true meaning. Those of us whom you represent are trusting you to take their advice as opposed to heeding the siren call of special interest groups who financially benefit from creating controversy and carrying the torch as a false prophet of “conservation”. I would remind you that this Plan was not conjured up in some dark and dank basement in Corvallis and sprung on the public at the last minute. Throughout the process there has been considerable discussion with the stakeholder groups and many modifications have been made based on that input.

Data Scarcity Requires a Cautionary Approach: It is my fervent hope that we will someday beat the final hairs off this dead horse. This has been the final fall back when all else fails for our critics, for decades. If this argument appeals to you, one must ask how the Commission routinely approves the harvest of many game and sport fish species. How much do we actually know about Mackinaw trout populations in O'Dell or Wallowa Lakes? What is the population status of red tailed surf perch? What are the hen/young ratios for forest grouse or Hungarian partridge? What is the management threshold for cottontail rabbits? The list goes on and on. While these species are not caught or killed in the same magnitude as winter steelhead, you commonly authorize their harvest. And we do have information about these species. We know their distribution and, in some cases, how many are harvested. You are comfortable with authorizing harvest because you rely on the professional judgement of your ODFW staff. Using lack of data as an argument, especially when dealing with species where harvest is not an identified limiting factor, is a very slippery slope. I would remind you that you do have loads of information about winter steelhead and a professional staff intimately familiar with their population status. I would also point out that the proposed Plan is, by its very nature, cautionary and reactive. My advice is, when in doubt – go with the pros. Two of the absolute facts I learned in my fifty years of involvement with wildlife management: there is never enough money and there is never enough data.

Management Action Alternatives:

- WFEA/MEA – I am asking you to support the Alternative 1 -Staff Proposal. I would note that both spring and fall chinook are already managed as directed by species specific plans. Restricting potential hatchery programs for those species, where they are not currently in place, in this RSP may be contrary to chinook plan specifics and could cause confusion.
- Rogue Coho Salmon Hatchery Release - I ask you to support Alternative 1 – Staff Proposal. Hatchery release programs are subject to pHOS limitations and, as long as they remain at or below Plan requirements, there is no reason to limit increased production and fishing opportunity.
- Winter Steelhead Interim Bag Limits and Conservation Status Thresholds – I ask you to support Alternative 1 – Staff Proposal for the Winter Steelhead Interim Bag Limit. As has been discussed previously, having the opportunity to evaluate population dynamics for winter steelhead with a limited harvest regime in place is invaluable in determining the true impact of harvest on these wild fish populations. In addition, this very limited harvest program allows for the implementation of a wild steelhead harvest card to be used as a source of funding for the promised increased monitoring efforts. I view this as an innovative and acceptable proposal that speaks directly to the continual scarcity of funds to conduct very important data gathering efforts necessary to inform management decisions. Further, this harvest strategy allows anglers to creel fatally injured fish that are injured inadvertently. I ask you to support Staff Proposal Option A – Winter Steelhead Conservation Status Thresholds. I would note that this proposal already reflects an increase in juvenile site occupancy from the earlier 65% level. Increases beyond these levels are not warranted.

In closing, I would like to thank the Commission for the time and energy that you have devoted to thoroughly vetting this Plan. I also commend the ODFW staff who worked for countless hours to develop and modify this plan and for their openness to suggestions, requests and public input.

Subject: regarding harvest of wild steelhead in SW Oregon

Hello Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission members,

I wanted to offer a few thoughts and observations from a California-based steelhead angler on retention of wild Southern Oregon steelhead. As an avid angler and fish biologist at California Trout, much of my life revolves around salmon and steelhead. In this case, I'm acting to prevent a run of fish from becoming listed.

Although Oregon is not my home state, my passion for salmon/steelhead often takes me across state lines. I see the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission's task here as balancing the desires of conservation-minded anglers with the desires of anglers wishing for harvest opportunities. The Commission likely does not want to reduce angling opportunities, or harm guides and communities dependent on income from steelhead anglers.

From my perspective, halting the retention of wild steelhead will not harm sales of fishing licenses, will not reduce steelhead angler tourism to areas with popular fisheries, and will not harm the businesses of commercial guides who target steelhead.

In northern California we've not had any retention of wild steelhead for many years. The Smith River was the last holdout on this rule, while rivers further south haven't had harvest of wild fish in many years. None of these restrictions has prevented Californians from enjoying steelhead angling. There are still tons of guides and private boats fishing the Smith River when it drops into fishable shape. I'd also point out that wild-harvest restrictions in Washington State also don't seem to have done anything to stop people from fishing for steelhead. If anything, steelhead angling seems to be more popular than ever in Northern California and in Washington.

In seeking a balance between harvest and conservation:

- Of former steelhead anglers I've spoken with, I've never once heard one say "I quit fishing for steelhead because we couldn't keep them anymore"
- Of former steelhead anglers I've spoken with, I heard many, many say "I quit fishing because there aren't enough steelhead in the river to fish for anymore"

Some observations specific to Southern Oregon:

- The spring salmon fishery on the Rogue River is limited to harvest of hatchery-clipped fish only, and yet this fishery remains very popular with both commercial guides and with private anglers
- The summer/fall steelhead fishery on the Rogue River is also limited to retention of hatchery-clipped fish only, and remains very popular with all anglers
- The Smith River steelhead fishery was the last in California to disallow retention of wild steelhead, but this has not reduced the number of either commercial guides or private anglers
- The Rogue River and Elk River hatcheries will still provide adequate opportunities for steelhead harvest. Northern California's Mad River hatchery continues to draw anglers from all over the state, while retention of wild steelhead is not allowed.

Thank you for considering this important chance to preserve the magnificent runs of wild steelhead in Southwest Oregon.

Subject: Wild Steelhead Release

Commissioners:

Thank you for your time and attention to the future management of wild, winter steelhead in SW Oregon.

My name is Jim Andras and I support adopting catch and release regulations for wild winter steelhead throughout the region.

I have guided the upper Rogue River for 15 years and without fail, August through December account for more days on the water than the rest of the year combined. Worth noting here is that ODFW manages wild summer steelhead under catch and release regulations and still, my guests return year after year keeping me in this crazy business of chasing fish, supporting my family, and contributing to our local economy.

I do not know any of you personally or your individual connection to wild steelhead but I truly hope that simply hearing those words takes you to a river somewhere, fills you with anticipation, heightens your senses, makes you feel most alive.

Today, wild, anadromous fish face a growing list of factors including climate and ocean change that contribute to troubling population trends throughout their native range and in our region. ODFW acknowledges a changing climate and bluntly states on their website that current “conditions are undermining the ability of lands and waters to support Oregon’s native fish and wildlife, and the cultural and economic benefits they provide. This represents a serious and immediate threat to the Department’s ability to achieve its mission and meet its statutory mandates to manage the public trust resources in its care.”

Please stand with Oregon’s wild winter steelhead today and for the future... adopt catch and release regulations throughout the SW zone.

Subject: Comments on the Rogue/South Coast Conservation Plan

Commissioners and Staff:

I am a retired Fishery Biologist with 30 years of work experience on Oregon's mid and south Coast. My career started in 1969 working on a (Fish Commission) research project under Dr Paul Reimers studying the life history of Chinook salmon in the Elk and Sixes watersheds. Another aspect of the project was developing rearing and release strategies for the newly constructed Elk River Hatchery. I have continued to be involved in fishery management issues since my retirement from ODFW in 1999. I currently reside in Bandon, OR. I have served on ODFW's OHRC Advisory Committee and the STAC Committee. I also serve on the Board of Directors of the Coos County STEP Commission and South Coast Anglers STEP Association. I am also a Scientific Advisor to the Oregon Angler's Alliance.

These comments pertain to the Rogue/South Coast Conservation Plan that is being considered on December 16th and 17th:

A varied group of users spent many work sessions with ODFW Staff developing a Plan that addresses many issues. The Commission should adopt a plan that follows our traditional model of conservation while allowing maximum choices for public utilization of the resource consistent with protecting naturally produced salmonids.

Anglers should be provided a choice on harvest of wild winter steelhead. The SCIENCE shows that a 1/5 or 1/3 harvest opportunity for wild winter steelhead would not damage the wild steelhead populations on the South Coast. There certainly is no justification for a 5 year moratorium on harvest of wild winter steelhead. Because a significant amount of the watersheds on the South Coast are in Federal ownership and receive a high degree of protection the habitat in these watersheds is some of the highest quality habitat in Oregon and can support some limited harvest of wild winter steelhead. Anglers who value "catch and release" are free to pursue that method, but they should not be allowed to limit other anglers who might value keeping a fish when the SCIENCE shows the wild populations can sustain a limited harvest.

I also feel that hatchery production is extremely important on the South Coast to maintain and enhance harvest opportunities for salmonids. We all place a high value on wild salmonid populations and want them to be protected, but science based hatchery production is a valuable tool to allow some harvest of this valuable resource. Many residents of the South Coast depend on some harvest of salmonids to supplement their diets, and most could not afford to buy expensive salmonids in a store.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on these issues that are very important to residents of the South Coast.

Rogue-South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan

(RSP)

Dec. 13. 2021

My name is Dave Kuehn (keen). I am the president of the Oregon South Coast Fishermen based in Brookings and a board member of the Oregon Coast Anglers in Reedsport. I also serve on the ODFW Sportfishing Advisory Committee.

Once again the Commission finds itself confronted with considerable public comment on an impending action. One option is to count noses and go with the majority; the other, and most sensible, is to follow your ODFW Staff recommendations regarding the RSP.

We encourage the Commission to trust the plan. Trust your ODFW Staff and the Stakeholders that spent over two years producing a very comprehensive well written and unbiased proposal. Throughout the process there has been considerable discussion with the stakeholder groups and many modifications have been made based on that input. Wildlife management decisions should be based on the best available science-not on the sheer numbers of responses from people who write in, call in and message you from other states.

Assessing current populations with the standard harvest program is key in procuring accurate scientific data. Eliminating harvest with catch and release only will likely lead to “false positive” conclusions. The success of this plan is contingent on maintaining harvest. Harvest is the one variable we can control.

We recommend that the Commission rule in favor of the RSP and the ODFW Staff recommendation of a limited harvest of wild winter steelhead. 1 per day, 3 for the season.

Thank you for your consideration!

Subject: Catch and Release Only For All Wild Steelhead

Hello Chair Wahl and ODFW Commissioners,

I felt it necessary to write to you to voice my strong encouragement to end all harvest of wild steelhead in this state. I have been a dedicated full time steelhead outfitter and guide in Oregon for the last 20 years and have been a dedicated steelhead angler for 30 years.

This past year, for the first time ever, we lost our entire Deschutes River guiding season due to drought, lethal warm water and the lowest return of steelhead to the Columbia River basin in history. This guiding season would normally provide my family and the families of our three employees the majority of our annual income. There should be state assistance funds made available to help us guides and outfitters recover our losses as we are experiencing a fisheries disaster.

To add to the unfortunate situation, this past Summer/Fall season was coming off of the worst Winter/Spring steelhead season on the north Oregon coast that we have ever experienced. Given the fact that we don't have real data outside of dam counts, we have no idea how many steelhead returned to our coastal rivers last Winter nor do we know how many will return this year. We DO know that we are at critically low abundance and the one "H" factor that we can most easily control is Harvest. We must end all wild steelhead harvest and immediately close ALL spawning tributaries to ALL angling. They must be left alone when they are in these vulnerable areas to conserve what remains of their energy for spawning.

We are at a tipping point and we very much could lose the opportunity to fish for steelhead indefinitely. I have made the very difficult decision to not guide Winter steelhead this season and am now looking for other work to get me through.

This is not a hard decision. Oregon is way behind the curve here. There is nowhere else in the world, outside of a very small and limited slot size in SE Alaska, that allows harvest of any wild steelhead. California and British Columbia mandated catch and release of all wild steelhead in the 90's and Washington did just a few years ago (arguably too late).

Do not hesitate and do not think twice about this decision, my job and many thousands of jobs like mine depend on Wild Steelhead survival. They are repeat spawners, genetically unique, ecologically crucial, a huge economic engine driver and are worth so much more than meat in a freezer.

Put an end to this madness now and forever. Thank you for your time!

Dear Commissioners,

Even though I live a thousand miles away, I value every opportunity I get to fish for steelhead. Oregon is top of the list in Steelhead destinations for me. My friends and I travel to fish the Coast fisheries in the winter, and the Columbia Tributaries in the late summer. With the recent trends in fish populations, I believe that it is irresponsible to allow the harvest of any wild steelhead. We need every wild fish and the genes they carry to be able to sustain populations for the future. Please stop allowing the harvest of wild steelhead on the South Coast and incorporate protections into the Rogue South Coast Multi-Species Conservation Management plan.

Thanks for standing up for Wild Steelhead.

Hello,

I would like to voice my thoughts on the topic of new regulations pertaining to wild steelhead in Oregon. I feel due to diminished runs new regulations should be put in place that require all steelhead caught by sport fishing to be released. Catch and release has worked on other fisheries and there is no reason Oregon should not be doing the same. I would also support single barbless hooks for both fly and gear. I also feel there should be a bait band across the board. Thank you for your time.

ODFW Commission,

I am writing to ask that you please take action and change the regulations to catch and release for all wild steelhead in OR. Specifically as it relates to the Rogue South Coast Conservation Management Plan.

I'm very surprised that OR has not already taken this approach and has the embarrassing distinction to be the only region on the planet that allows retention of wild steelhead. Wild steelhead retention is even illegal in Russia.

There is not enough data to support retention of wild steelhead and there is clearly a problem with numbers of wild steelhead. All you have to do is look around at ALL of the neighboring states and communities. Steelhead are disappearing and quickly.

Please take the conservative approach before it is too late for steelhead and future anglers.

Thanks for your consideration.

Rogue-South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan (RSP)

Dear Chair Wahl, Commissioners, and Director Melcher,

My name is Stephen Maher. I live in Eugene, OR and I am an architect, an angler, and the incoming President of the Oregon Council of Fly Fishers International (ORCFFI). We are a group of fly anglers who care deeply about our state's waters, and especially the native fish populations, such as the southwestern steelhead.

The FFI supports catch and release regulations using single barbless hooks and artificial flies or lures only in the RSP management area until adequate monitoring is in place and fisheries managers are confident that harvest can be implemented sustainably. The current data set is missing significant factors: there were not any adult spawning surveys conducted in the Rogue Basin this year, the Percent of Hatchery Fish on Spawning Grounds (pHOS) is unknown, and there are not any adult estimates for any of the south coast watersheds. Requiring the release of wild steelhead will increase angler opportunity to catch more fish. Fisheries managers throughout the pacific northwest have moved to catch and release regulations to help boost adult steelhead escapement. This has proven to be an effective management tool that still provides fishing opportunities. Adopting these regulations in the RSP management area are best practice in the pacific northwest.

We must implement precautionary management until adequate data is collected and monitoring is in place. The primary data set for population monitoring is for juvenile counts, which is simply not adequate for monitoring adults. And considering the past six years have shown a steady decline of juveniles, harvest is far too risky for our wild steelhead populations. Hatchery steelhead can and should be harvested to fulfill that opportunity; 89% of wild harvest already occurs in the Rogue and Chetko rivers; these are streams with an abundance of hatchery fish. The Oregon Council encourages the commission to direct the department to implement rigorous monitoring, similar to what has been adopted successfully in Idaho and Washington, to better understand the state of our wild Oregon steelhead populations and make more informed decisions.

Considering this year's historic low return on steelhead across the state, we believe the current harvest regulations in this region only contributes to the undeniable decline of wild winter steelhead. We want to support ODFW and other stakeholders to prevent their further decline or extinction, therefore the ORCFFI asks the Commission to adopt Alternative (2), catch and release angling regulations for winter steelhead in the Rogue South Coast Multi-Species Conservation Management Plan.

Thank you for your time and for the opportunity to testify today.

Sincerely,

Stephen P. Maher

We want longer-term, proactive planning to restoring wild fish populations to healthy and harvestable levels. If your argument is that populations in the Rogue and South Coast are harvestable, collect and analyze enough data such that scientific peer review of your data proves that populations are adequate. The current management seems to be very reactive, and this is unacceptable. Release wild fish.

Re: The undersigned Businesses support catch and release for wild winter steelhead in Rogue South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan

Chair Wahl, Members of the Commission, and Director Melcher,

The Rogue South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan (RSP) will provide future management and direction for steelhead, cutthroat trout, and coho salmon fisheries of southern Oregon for the next twenty years. Our businesses envision a future of thriving wild salmon and steelhead populations that are self-sustaining despite the threats of climate change and habitat loss/alteration. We cannot support a plan that allows wild harvest at the expense of future salmonid populations. As businesses that will be impacted by this plan, we ask the commission to consider how this plan will benefit the future of the fishing industry and economy of the Pacific Northwest.

When it comes to angling regulations, catch and release for wild winter steelhead provides the best balance of angling opportunity while safeguarding our natural resources. Wild steelhead runs have been declining across the Pacific Northwest. A precautionary approach to management will continue to provide opportunity without negatively impacting the resource while agencies gather the necessary data to manage the populations sustainably into the future.

At present, Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife (ODFW) does not have adult wild winter steelhead population estimates for the entire Rogue River, its major tributaries i.e. Applegate and Illinois Rivers, or the south coast. ODFW does not have accurate harvest rates of wild winter steelhead and cannot determine the mortality of wild winter steelhead. Before allowing harvest of wild fish in any watershed, ODFW must know spawner escapement.

ODFW does collect data on juvenile steelhead in the Rogue and south coast watersheds. The data shows a large decline in juvenile steelhead. In fact, ODFW's monitoring report published this year shows the last six years have displayed the lowest juvenile counts on record.

ODFW relies heavily on historical Gold Ray Dam counts that are correlated with half-pounder wild steelhead (steelhead that come back early) seined near Gold Beach, Oregon. A historical analysis of this relationship between half pounder and adult winter steelhead can be drastically mischaracterized when warm and unproductive ocean conditions exist.

Winter steelhead fisheries create jobs, promote tourism, support restaurants, and the overall economy of southern Oregon. If wild fish numbers decline, ODFW will be forced to shut down the fishery. Wild steelhead populations to the north have already experienced fisheries closures and widespread impacts to local and regional economies.

To be clear, if we have no fish, we cannot fish. If we cannot fish, the entire fisheries economy suffers. ODFW licenses sales will plummet in this region and businesses will be lost. Our decisions now will affect the future fisheries of generations and businesses to come.

ODFW Commissioners, please direct the department to implement robust monitoring and place a 5-year pause on wild steelhead harvest. ODFW must use a precautionary approach to manage wild winter steelhead populations and ensure that we put both our fish and our businesses on a path toward sustainability. This key fisheries management change will ensure abundant wild fish for the future of our fisheries.

Dear ODFW,

Please take the necessary steps to protect wild steelhead in Southern Oregon by making winter wild steelhead catch and release only. This past summer I had the opportunity to travel to Oregon for the first time. In mid-July, I was fortunate to catch and release wild steelhead on the North Umpqua and several more on the Rogue River. In the future, I'd like nothing more than to do the same in the Winter. I'd like my children and their kids to experience those rivers and wild steelhead firsthand.

Thank you for your consideration.

Harvest is not an option because there is not adequate monitoring, no adult population estimates, and no accurate harvest rates for those fisheries. Until these basic statistics are available, we must implement a conservative approach and adopt catch and release regulations.

Dear Sirs,

I urge the Commission to unanimously accept the Management Plan as written.

Over 40 ODFW staff and stakeholders worked over two years to produce this plan.

It is vital to the economy of the south coast especially concerning sportfishing, tourism, new anglers, and fishing licenses.

Sportfishing has no effect on fish conservation. Fish runs are at the mercy of habitat and ocean conditions.

Please ensure the public's trust in ODFW and the plan process by adopting the management plan as presented.

Dear ODFW Comission,

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments on the Rogue/South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan.

As a fisherman and photographer for years in Coos Bay and the Coos River, I have seen a drastic change in the past 6 years. The quantity of fish has declined. The number of salmon predators has increased. The wild bird popular has changed. These are things that you seen while on the water each year. The water temperatures have increased and salmon behavior has changed.

I have 3 things that seem to be obvious changes that need to be right away for Coos Bay and the Coos River area is to stop dredging the River during spawning. This lowers the oxygen levels, create added noise and debris. This is something that can be done during non peak salmon spawning. There is no reason for it to be done solely during Chinook and Coho spawning.

The second obvious change that needs to be made is removing and cleaning the toxic waste site at the head of the bay. Gosh used to come into the bay and now the salmon appear to be avoiding the bay and it's head on the ocean side. Why is more effort not being placed on its removal and clean up.

Lastly fish hatcheries need to be brought back up to producing salmon. Sportsman like to fish, but if there are no fish, then you loose support from the sportsman who love the water and want to protect it.

Sincerely,

I am writing this evening as a resident of Coos Bay and an avid fisherwoman on the rivers affected by the commission's management plan.

I strongly support catch and release regulations on south coast rivers until there is adequate data to show how many adult fish are returning to the systems. Last winter was a dismal year for fishing, and while every river system on the Pacific Coast is experiencing record low returns, I find it hard to justify harvesting a wild fish.

Without wild fish, we cannot fish. Without wild fish, I cannot spend my money in the communities surrounding these rivers.

Again, I strongly support the catch and release option for the Rogue South Coast Management plan alongside the overwhelming majority of public commenters as stated in previous commission meetings, and you should too.

We need to protect the wild species of salmon we have left. Most anglers like myself don't want or need to haul these amazing fish out of the water for harvest and can appreciate them with a photo and release them back into the water where they belong.

In my experience people that are out harvesting fish really don't care as much and therefor tend to ignore the rules surrounding the harvestable fish anyways, leading to more issues. Catch and release only would protect the fish and create a better culture around winter steelhead fishing in Oregon.

Other states and regions have already adopted these rules to protect the fish, please don't fall behind them.

Hello ODFW

I'm a paying annual license angler and I support catch n release for wild steelhead.

Id like to voice my support for "Catch and Release Only" Wild Steelhead regulations statewide. The commission is meeting Thursday to vote on the Rogue South Coast Management Plan where is is currently LEGAL to harvest wild steelhead.

Oregon is WAY behind the curve here, California, Washington state and British Columbia banned wild steelhead harvest in the 90s. With steelhead at critical abundance up and down the west coast, it is NOW OR NEVER.

Dear Commissioners

I strongly support new regulations to protect all harvest of wild steelhead in Southern Oregon. It is important to act sooner than later, and assure a full and robust recovery of this state treasure. People travel to our state to fish for wild steelhead for recreation, not harvest, adding millions to license fees and our local economy. Local anglers who wish to harvest steelhead, have more than adequate opportunity to do so with our hatchery bred stock. In the future if our wild steelhead population recovers to the point where minimum harvest regulations might be appropriate, then those can be revisited in the future. In the meantime, it is critical to act now to prevent further reductions in our beloved wild steelhead returns. Thank you.

Subject: Against Wild Steelhead Harvest

Hey there.

I am writing you in regards to the Rouge Southwest Coast Management Plan. I beg you to vote against maintaining any harvest of wild steelhead. We need every wild Steelhead possible to live and procreate in Oregon rivers.

I am a Montana resident, but spend multiple weeks every year in Oregon, Washington and Idaho fishing for steelhead. Washington and Idaho's wild steelhead numbers have been declining and the last 5 years, they have seen scarily low (below or just meeting escapement) returns. Oregon has been seeing this happen as well. With some of the worst summer run returns ever recorded on Deschutes and North Umpqua. The winter returns last year in the southern coast felt dismal, while fishing dozens of days without finding a wild fish on the chetco, rouge and pistol rivers.

I barely fished in Idaho this fall (due to low returns) and didn't set foot in the Deschutes because of closures and low returns. The Olympic peninsula might entirely shut down this winter for the first time ever. The writing is on the wall for wild steelhead. If we don't take action now, wild steelhead will become a thing of the past. They will be no more than a memory, shared, not through angling, but through stories of how it used to be, when wild steelhead were abundant in the Oregon Rivers.

Oregon is the only state in the lower 48 that allows harvest of wild steelhead. It is an insane practice, with no actually fish count numbers to back it up. Whoever is keeping this archaic practice in place should be fired, bonked on their head and put in the smoker.

Please stop the harvest of wild steelhead on the southern coast of Oregon!!!!

Thanks for your time

Dear Commission Members:

I've lived in Grants Pass for just over 41 years. For all those years I've fished for steelhead, at different times using lures, bait, plugs and flies. My back yard is the Rogue, Chetco, Illinois and Applegate Rivers. I've killed many wild and hatchery steelhead. But I haven't intentionally killed a wild steelhead in many years. They are too precious. My experience is that wild steelhead on these rivers are in danger. I urge you to adopt a catch and release policy for wild steelhead.

The staff at ODFW have done a good job with the resources they have to estimate the degree of danger. I've served on the Grants Pass school board and know the value of supporting staff. But your staff's database is inadequate. Your staff has not adequately taken into consideration the risk posed by climate change on ocean conditions and habitat for the wild steelhead. They could not have because they admit they are extrapolating from aging data. They promise close monitoring of wild stocks just in case they are wrong, but admit that monitoring is substantially in the future and limited, as always, by funding. Please don't gamble with the fate of these wild animals.

Subject: Catch and Release for Wild Steelhead in Southern Oregon

Dear Chair Wahl and ODFW Commission,

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments to the Commission on the October draft of the Rogue South Coast Multi-Species Conservation Management Plan (RSP). A plan centered around conservation and the long term health of identified species is critical to the future of these fish, the rivers, and the communities of southern Oregon. The following comments, concerns, and suggested changes are provided to ensure the conservation and future health of the identified species. I am deeply concerned the department did not consider public comments during the public comment period and has failed to provide the commission with the same suite of alternatives for discussion and consideration.

Angling Alternatives

In response to the public draft of the RSP published in July, over 2,260 people asked the department to implement catch and release regulations until there is adequate adult monitoring. The Commission Draft, provided as Attachment 3 for Exhibit 3 of the October 15, 2021 Commission meeting, does not provide the commission with any alternatives for angling opportunities and does not propose catch and release for wild steelhead. I am very concerned that the department did not listen to the public and did not take their comments into consideration. Without current adult harvest monitoring, adult mortality, or adequate adult escapement for multiple generations, ODFW does not know the total impact of harvest on wild winter steelhead as a result of directed harvest and catch and release angling. I request the commission direct the department to change regulations to "Catch and Release" for wild winter steelhead on the Rogue and south coast until a five-year review of adequate monitoring data is available to inform harvest management.

Management Triggers and Actions

The conservation status for all species has been indicated in the plan. The conservation status for Winter Steelhead on the south coast will be identified by juvenile occupancy. The Department did not provide examples of a management agency that successfully utilizes juveniles as a health indicator to evaluate overall population health or as a mechanism to take action to reverse species in decline. I ask that the department utilize adult spawner escapement from newly instated south coast spawning surveys after five years of plan implementation.

The conservation triggers in the draft RSP don't respond quickly enough to fish population decline. The Commission Draft RSP states action will be taken when a two year average is below conservation status, which is not adequate. When identified populations dip below conservation status in a single year, action needs to take place. Second, the plan must commit the Department to take action when populations reach an identified trigger similar to the Rogue Fall Chinook SMU Conservation Management plan, e.g. angling regulation changes, hatchery program changes, and habitat action changes.

Lastly, I request ODFW provide the following fundamental data on population health to manage species indicated in the plan:

- Adult spawner escapement in each watershed
- Juvenile measurements correlated to adult escapement in each watershed
- Effects of harvest (mandatory reporting of all harvest and catch and release)
- Effects of hatcheries (pHOS)

Hatchery Actions

The current RSP provides a suite of actions that increase hatchery expansion throughout the Rogue and south coast.

I request that the department does not include any hatchery expansion in the RSP by making the following changes to the draft plan:

- Eliminate the newly proposed Euchre Creek and Winchuck River Mixed Emphasis Areas
- Eliminate offsite hatchery releases in the Rogue River
- Eliminate increased ESA listed Coho releases in the Rogue River
- Decrease smolt outputs to reach mitigation goals in the Rogue basin

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments on the Commission Draft of the RSP. Critical data and monitoring will be necessary to inform management of wild winter steelhead harvest on the Rogue and South Coast. Until that monitoring is in place and data available, I ask the Department to continue to provide the opportunity for catch and release angling for wild winter steelhead on the Rogue and south coast watersheds and harvest in the interim on hatchery origin stocks. These changes will provide the precautionary conservation management necessary to help restore and sustain wild abundance.

Sincerely,

Subject: RSP Final Draft Comments

Dear Chair Wahl,

I am writing to comment on the October draft of the Rogue-South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan (RSP). The RSP will dictate the management direction for many ecologically important steelhead waters, such as the Sixes, Coquille, Elk, and Rogue Rivers. A plan that prioritizes the long-term health of wild steelhead is necessary when the future is more uncertain than ever due to the impacts of climate change. I encourage you to strongly consider the following comments and suggested changes, as they are provided with the goal of restoring and sustaining wild steelhead abundance in the future.

Angling Alternatives

Thank you for directing the department to include a catch and release alternative in the final draft of the RSP at the October 25th Commission meeting. In response to the public draft of the RSP published in July, over 2250 people asked the department to implement catch and release regulations until there is adequate adult monitoring data available. Without current adult harvest monitoring, adult mortality, or adequate adult escapement for multiple generations, ODFW does not know the total impact of harvest on wild winter steelhead as a result of directed harvest and catch and release angling. I request the commission direct the department to change regulations to "Catch and Release" for wild winter steelhead on the Rogue and south coast until a five-year review of adequate monitoring data is available to inform harvest management.

Management Triggers and Actions

The conservation status for all species has been indicated in the plan. The conservation status for Winter Steelhead on the south coast will be identified by juvenile occupancy. The Department did not provide examples of a management agency that successfully utilizes juveniles as a health indicator to evaluate overall population health or as a mechanism to take action to reverse species in decline. I ask that the department utilize adult spawner escapement from newly instated south coast spawning surveys after five years of plan implementation. The conservation triggers in the draft RSP don't respond quickly enough to fish population decline. The Commission Draft RSP states action will be taken when a two year average is below conservation status, which is not adequate. When identified populations dip below conservation status in a single year, action needs to take place. Second, the plan must commit the Department to take action when populations reach an identified trigger similar to the Rogue Fall Chinook SMU Conservation Management plan, e.g. angling regulation changes, hatchery program changes, and habitat action changes.

Lastly, I request ODFW provide the following fundamental data on population health to manage species indicated in the plan:

- Adult spawner escapement in each watershed
- Juvenile measurements correlated to adult escapement in each watershed
- Effects of harvest (mandatory reporting of all harvest and catch and release)
- Effects of hatcheries (PHOS)

Hatchery Actions

The current RSP provides a suite of actions that increase hatchery expansion throughout the Rogue and south coast. I request that the department does not include any hatchery expansion in the RSP by making the following changes to the draft plan:

- Eliminate the newly proposed Euchre Creek and Winchuck River Mixed Emphasis Areas
- Eliminate offsite hatchery releases in the Rogue River

- Eliminate increased ESA listed Coho releases in the Rogue River
- Decrease smolt outputs to reach mitigation goals in the Rogue basin

I appreciate the opportunity to provide comment on the final draft of the RSP. I urge you to take a cautious management approach in a time when climate change makes it extremely difficult to predict trends in abundance and productivity. For wild steelhead to persist in numbers that can support fisheries in the future, a management approach that is informed by accurate and timely data needs to be taken. This type of management will sustain the long-term health of wild steelhead. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Subject: Concerns regarding the Rogue–South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan

Dear Commission Chair Mary Wahl,

I am writing to ask you to reject the Rogue–South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan to protect the health of the fisheries of the Rogue River.

The process to develop the plan is seriously flawed and the Department failed to provide recent monitoring data to support the most critical decision parameters. I request the Commission reject the plan at the December 17 meeting. The deficiencies in the plan cannot be remedied prior to December 17.

The Plan fails to provide for management of resident rainbow trout.

The Plan states, “Resident rainbow trout were not assessed for this plan but contribute to the diversity and long-term viability of O. mykiss, particularly in the Rogue Basin.” There is no reason given for this arbitrary exclusion of resident rainbow trout from the plan. The massive stocking of hatchery produced resident rainbow drives a robust fishery near population centers. Families and local community members participate in this popular fishery. Excluding resident rainbow trout excludes a broad spectrum of our society who use this species as a game fish.

Undesirable effects of interbreeding with hatchery steelhead is not adequately assessed in the Plan since resident rainbow trout are excluded from the Plan. Thus the exclusion of resident rainbow trout has both social and ecological consequences that cannot be remedied prior to the December 17th meeting of the ODFW Commission.

The Plan is incomplete because it fails to provide a reasonable range of options for hatchery fish release numbers for Commission review and decision.

This Plan would allow for 633,000 hatchery steelhead and coho salmon to be released into the Rogue River and Chetco River. This represents a huge commitment of resources. Decision making involving large commitments of resources should always provide the decision makers with a range of alternatives accompanied by analysis that explains the tradeoffs. The Plan with a single proposal for massive hatchery fish releases seriously compromises the Commission’s ability to make an informed decision and to garner the public’s input about the desirable level of hatchery fish production. The Plan fails to provide the Commission with alternatives for best complying with “responsible use of hatcheries” as required by the Native Fish Policy. It is irresponsible for ODFW to offer only one hatchery fish production option for the Commission’s approval. It would be prudent for the Commission to reject the Plan for this reason.

The Plan lacks critical adult tributary spawning data from the past 5-10 years for summer steelhead and coho salmon population scale analysis.

The Plan does not provide credible population and trend data for summer steelhead and coho salmon in the Applegate River basin tributaries and Middle Rogue tributaries. Similarly, the Plan lacks coho spawning population data for the vast Illinois River basin that would establish trends and viability for this federally listed species. The Department failed to renew spawning summer steelhead counts and tributary coho salmon counts prior to and during Plan development. Rejecting the Plan is a credible decision due to lack of adequate tributary spawner counts for coho salmon and summer steelhead. The Plan should be rejected until critical field data from tributaries has been collected.

In summary, I believe it would be prudent and responsible for the Commission to reject the Plan at the December meeting until the Plan can be properly revised.

Sincerely,

Ms. Cindy M. Dutka

Subject: Take Action: Conserve Wild Fish on Oregon's South Coast

Dear ODFW Commission,

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments on the Rogue/South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan (RSP).

Southwest Oregon is home to beautiful, globally unique watersheds like the Rogue, Illinois, and Chetco Rivers. Productive habitats and wild fish runs power local economies and are an important part of Southwest Oregon communities. Due to low steelhead returns this year, we saw emergency fishing closures on the Deschutes, John Day, and North Umpqua Rivers. These closures caused considerable economic and recreational loss. We are committed to preventing this from occurring in the RSP area through precautionary management.

Key steps to safeguarding the region's wild fish—and the economies and communities that depend on them—include catch-and-release for wild winter steelhead during a five-year data collection period, robust population monitoring, and cautious management of wild fish emphasis areas.

Managing wild fish in a precautionary manner will not only help keep southern Oregon salmon and steelhead off the Endangered Species List, but will also set the region up to better withstand the climate shocks that we know are coming—and that, in some cases, are already here. The localized effects of climate change adds considerable uncertainty to our sense of how well these populations will adapt and survive in a warmer, dryer future. We must acknowledge that wild harvest, hatchery production, habitat loss/degradation, poor ocean conditions, and climate change all work synergistically, not in isolation, and are having detrimental effects on our already-depleted wild salmon and steelhead stocks.

Where sufficient data are unavailable to adequately determine the population health in each of the RSP basins, conservation should be prioritized over wild harvest opportunities.

In order to protect wild fish in the RSP, I ask the commission to vote for the following alternatives.

Hatchery Management

To minimize risks to the wild fish runs from hatchery fish, I support:

- Wild Fish Emphasis Areas for all South Coast species—including Chinook.
- No permanent hatchery acclimation sites on the Rogue or Chetco Rivers.
- No increase from current hatchery releases numbers for any species in any basin.
- Reevaluation of the summer steelhead program and release targets at Cole Rivers hatchery.

Wild Winter Steelhead Harvest

Until adequate data has been collected and clearly shows that wild winter steelhead populations can be sustainably harvested, we should implement the following wild steelhead protocols:

- Catch-and-release for wild winter steelhead in all basins for a five-year interim period.

- Support for electronic licensing, steelhead validation card.
- Support increased hatchery daily bag limits in the Rogue, Chetco, and Elk Rivers to maintain angler opportunities.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide my comments to the commission. We urge commissioners to manage these precious resources cautiously until the critical data gaps are ameliorated. Our best chance to have thriving wild salmon and steelhead populations in the future, is to act now.

Sincerely,

Mr. mattia foschi

| Dear Chair Wahl, I would like to add my voice to this form letter. At a time when nearly all wild fish runs are in decline, it makes sense to suspend the harvest of wild steelhead until                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |  |  |  |  | Jason Rice        | RSP Final Draft Comments                                                        | Tue 12/14/2021 10:... | 52 KB |                  |         |  |

| Dear Chair Wahl, All salmon and steelhead fisherman want abundant runs and to be able to harvest fish, even wild stock. God willing there will be a time to do that again. Subject: Take Action: Conserve Wild Fish on Oregon's South Coast

Dear ODFW Commission,

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments on the Rogue/South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan (RSP).

After 3 years of research and nothing comes from it? What a waste of resources of both time, expertise(?) and PUBLIC MONEY!!! How can that be?! No excuse. You now leave open the very threats to these rivers and their connected, surrounding ecosystems of plant/wild life that currently plagues them. To say "we don't know anymore than we did 3 years ago" leaves the door open to the state's and USFS's industrial loggers to cut the old growth and forests abutting these watersheds, since no/outdated data correlates, in their mentality, to "no reason why not" clear-cut, spray and rape the land!

What is wrong here?! Get beyond policy and grasp the SERIOUSNESS OF CLIMATE CATASTROPHE and LOSS OF ALL SPECIES within the rivers' ecosystems! It is already clear (CON)SCIENCE that a widely diverse ecosystem supports a healthy habitat for everything within it!!!

Southwest Oregon is home to beautiful, globally unique watersheds like the Rogue, Illinois, and Chetco Rivers. Productive habitats and wild fish runs power local economies and are an important part of Southwest Oregon communities. Due to low steelhead returns this year, we saw emergency fishing closures on the Deschutes, John Day, and North Umpqua Rivers. These closures caused considerable economic and recreational loss. We are committed to preventing this from occurring in the RSP area through precautionary management.

Key steps to safeguarding the region's wild fish—and the economies and communities that depend on them—include catch-and-release for wild winter steelhead during a five-year data collection period, robust population monitoring, and cautious management of wild fish emphasis areas.

Managing wild fish in a precautionary manner will not only help keep southern Oregon salmon and steelhead off the Endangered Species List, but will also set the region up to better withstand the climate shocks that we know are coming—and that, in some cases, are already here. The localized effects of climate change adds considerable uncertainty to our sense of how well these populations will adapt and survive in a warmer, dryer future. We must acknowledge that wild harvest, hatchery production, habitat loss/degradation, poor ocean conditions, and climate change all work synergistically, not in isolation, and are having detrimental effects on our already-depleted wild salmon and steelhead stocks.

Where sufficient data are unavailable to adequately determine the population health in each of the RSP basins, conservation should be prioritized over wild harvest opportunities.

In order to protect wild fish in the RSP, I ask the commission to vote for the following alternatives.

Hatchery Management

To minimize risks to the wild fish runs from hatchery fish, I support:

- Wild Fish Emphasis Areas for all South Coast species.

- No permanent hatchery acclimation sites on the Rogue or Chetco Rivers.
- No increase from current hatchery releases numbers for any species in any basin.
- Reevaluation of the summer steelhead program and release targets at Cole Rivers hatchery.

Wild Winter Steelhead Harvest

Until adequate data has been collected and clearly shows that wild winter steelhead populations can be sustainably harvested, we should implement the following wild steelhead protocols:

- Catch-and-release for wild winter steelhead in all basins for a five-year interim period.
- Support for electronic licensing, steelhead validation card.
- Support increased hatchery daily bag limits in the Rogue, Chetco, and Elk Rivers to maintain angler opportunities.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide my comments to the commission. We urge commissioners to manage these precious resources cautiously until the critical data gaps are ameliorated. Our best chance to have thriving wild salmon and steelhead populations in the future, is to act now.

Sincerely,

Mr. sean doyle

Dear ODFW Comission,

I'm at a loss for why ODFW would not require catch and release fishing for imperiled native fish of Southern Oregon when they have no sufficient data to reconcile what effects. There are plenty of examples of rivers And fish populations which have been mismanaged in similar ways over the years, and now the fish are barely holding on- if they return at all.

Doesn't it makes more sense to do the research first, and study the population dynamics over time before a kill fishery is titled 'sustainable'. Let's get it right before we have to watch another fabled steelhead/salmon/trout stream close due to lack of fish. It wouldn't be the first time. Government at work I guess.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments on the Rogue/South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan (RSP).

Subject: Concerns regarding the Rogue–South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan

Dear Commission Chair Mary Wahl,

We live in a unique and beautiful state. Adequate protection of our waterways are a vital element in keeping Oregon a viable resource for fishermen, hikers, land owners, and nature lovers. But more importantly, climate change is threatening to collapse the entire world aquatic system as ocean currents become less dense due to glacial melting. It is these currents that all fish depend upon. We may not be able to change this, but we can certainly protect our own precious wildlife.

I am writing to ask you to reject the Rogue–South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan to protect the health of the fisheries of the Rogue River.

The process to develop the plan is seriously flawed and the Department failed to provide recent monitoring data to support the most critical decision parameters. I request the Commission reject the plan at the December 17 meeting. The deficiencies in the plan cannot be remedied prior to December 17.

The Plan fails to provide for management of resident rainbow trout.

The Plan states, “Resident rainbow trout were not assessed for this plan but contribute to the diversity and long-term viability of O. mykiss, particularly in the Rogue Basin.” There is no reason given for this arbitrary exclusion of resident rainbow trout from the plan. The massive stocking of hatchery produced resident rainbow drives a robust fishery near population centers. Families and local community members participate in this popular fishery. Excluding resident rainbow trout excludes a broad spectrum of our society who use this species as a game fish.

Undesirable effects of interbreeding with hatchery steelhead is not adequately assessed in the Plan since resident rainbow trout are excluded from the Plan. Thus the exclusion of resident rainbow trout has both social and ecological consequences that cannot be remedied prior to the December 17th meeting of the ODFW Commission.

The Plan is incomplete because it fails to provide a reasonable range of options for hatchery fish release numbers for Commission review and decision.

This Plan would allow for 633,000 hatchery steelhead and coho salmon to be released into the Rogue River and Chetco River. This represents a huge commitment of resources. Decision making involving large commitments of resources should always provide the decision makers with a range of alternatives accompanied by analysis that explains the tradeoffs. The Plan with a single proposal for massive hatchery fish releases seriously compromises the Commission’s ability to make an informed decision and to garner the public’s input about the desirable level of hatchery fish production. The Plan fails to provide the Commission with alternatives for best complying with “responsible use of hatcheries” as required by the Native Fish Policy. It is irresponsible for ODFW to offer only one hatchery fish production option for the Commission’s approval. It would be prudent for the Commission to reject the Plan for this reason.

The Plan lacks critical adult tributary spawning data from the past 5-10 years for summer steelhead and coho salmon population scale analysis.

The Plan does not provide credible population and trend data for summer steelhead and coho salmon in the Applegate River basin tributaries and Middle Rogue tributaries. Similarly, the Plan lacks coho spawning population data for the vast Illinois River basin that would establish trends and viability for this federally listed species. The Department failed to renew spawning summer steelhead counts and tributary coho salmon counts prior to and during Plan development. Rejecting the Plan is a credible decision due to lack of adequate tributary spawner counts for coho salmon and summer steelhead. The Plan should be rejected until critical field data from tributaries has been collected.

In summary, I believe it would be prudent and responsible for the Commission to reject the Plan at the December meeting until the Plan can be properly revised.

Subject: Take Action: Conserve Wild Fish on Oregon's South Coast

Dear ODFW Comission,

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments on the Rogue/South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan (RSP).

Southwest Oregon is home to beautiful, globally unique watersheds like the Rogue, Illinois, and Chetco Rivers. Productive habitats and wild fish runs power local economies and are an important part of Southwest Oregon communities. Due to low steelhead returns this year, we saw emergency fishing closures on the Deschutes, John Day, and North Umpqua Rivers. These closures caused considerable economic and recreational loss. We are committed to preventing this from occurring in the RSP area through precautionary management.

Key steps to safeguarding the region's wild fish—and the economies and communities that depend on them—include catch-and-release for wild winter steelhead during a five-year data collection period, robust population monitoring, and cautious management of wild fish emphasis areas.

Managing wild fish in a precautionary manner will not only help keep southern Oregon salmon and steelhead off the Endangered Species List, but will also set the region up to better withstand the climate shocks that we know are coming—and that, in some cases, are already here. The localized effects of climate change adds considerable uncertainty to our sense of how well these populations will adapt and survive in a warmer, dryer future. We must acknowledge that wild harvest, hatchery production, habitat loss/degradation, poor ocean conditions, and climate change all work synergistically, not in isolation, and are having detrimental effects on our already-depleted wild salmon and steelhead stocks.

Where sufficient data are unavailable to adequately determine the population health in each of the RSP basins, conservation should be prioritized over wild harvest opportunities.

In order to protect wild fish in the RSP, I ask the commission to vote for the following alternatives.

Hatchery Management

To minimize risks to the wild fish runs from hatchery fish, I support:

- Wild Fish Emphasis Areas for all South Coast species—including Chinook.
- No permanent hatchery acclimation sites on the Rogue or Chetco Rivers.
- No increase from current hatchery releases numbers for any species in any basin.
- Reevaluation of the summer steelhead program and release targets at Cole Rivers hatchery.

Wild Winter Steelhead Harvest

Until adequate data has been collected and clearly shows that wild winter steelhead populations can be sustainably harvested, we should implement the following wild steelhead protocols:

- Catch-and-release for wild winter steelhead in all basins for a five-year interim period.

- Support for electronic licensing, steelhead validation card.
- Support increased hatchery daily bag limits in the Rogue, Chetco, and Elk Rivers to maintain angler opportunities.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide my comments to the commission. We urge commissioners to manage these precious resources cautiously until the critical data gaps are ameliorated. Our best chance to have thriving wild salmon and steelhead populations in the future is to act now.

It is our duty to preserve these species for future generations to enjoy. Thank you.

Key steps to safeguarding the region's wild fish—and the economies and communities that depend on them—include catch-and-release for wild winter steelhead during a five-year data collection period, robust population monitoring, and cautious management of wild fish emphasis areas.

Managing wild fish in a precautionary manner will not only help keep southern Oregon salmon and steelhead off the Endangered Species List, but will also set the region up to better withstand the climate shocks that we know are coming—and that, in some cases, are already here. The localized effects of climate change adds considerable uncertainty to our sense of how well these populations will adapt and survive in a warmer, dryer future. We must acknowledge that wild harvest, hatchery production, habitat loss/degradation, poor ocean conditions, and climate change all work synergistically, not in isolation, and are having detrimental effects on our already-depleted wild salmon and steelhead stocks.

Where sufficient data are unavailable to adequately determine the population health in each of the RSP basins, conservation should be prioritized over wild harvest opportunities.

In order to protect wild fish in the RSP, I ask the commission to vote for the following alternatives.

Hatchery Management

To minimize risks to the wild fish runs from hatchery fish, I support:

- Wild Fish Emphasis Areas for all South Coast species—including Chinook.
- No permanent hatchery acclimation sites on the Rogue or Chetco Rivers.
- No increase from current hatchery releases numbers for any species in any basin.
- Reevaluation of the summer steelhead program and release targets at Cole Rivers hatchery.

Wild Winter Steelhead Harvest

Until adequate data has been collected and clearly shows that wild winter steelhead populations can be sustainably harvested, we should implement the following wild steelhead protocols:

- Catch-and-release for wild winter steelhead in all basins for a five-year interim period.
- Support for electronic licensing, steelhead validation card.
- Support increased hatchery daily bag limits in the Rogue, Chetco, and Elk Rivers to maintain angler opportunities.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide my comments to the commission. We urge commissioners to manage these precious resources cautiously until the critical data gaps are ameliorated. Our best chance to have thriving wild salmon and steelhead populations in the future, is to act now.

Sincerely,

Mr Joseph DeBin

Subject: Take Action: Conserve Wild Fish on Oregon's South Coast

Dear ODFW Commission,

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments on the Rogue/South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan (RSP).

Southwest Oregon is an incredible part of Oregon, with beautiful natural habitats and fish runs that are renowned, and globally unique watersheds like the Rogue, Illinois, and Chetco Rivers. These incredible natural assets power local economies, and give life to SW Oregon's human and wildlife and plant communities.

You know this, because you live there.

Unfortunately, due to low steelhead returns this year, we saw emergency fishing closures on the Deschutes, John Day, and North Umpqua Rivers. These caused considerable economic and recreational loss. Precautionary management can prevent this from occurring in the RSP area.

Key steps - which many organizations and people have developed - to safeguarding the region's wild fish and the economies and communities that depend on them include:

- catch-and-release for wild winter steelhead during a five-year data collection period,
- robust population monitoring, and
- cautious management of wild fish emphasis areas.

Managing wild fish in a precautionary manner will not only help keep southern Oregon salmon and steelhead off the Endangered Species List, but will also set the region up to better withstand the climate changes and shocks that we know are coming—and that, in some cases, are already here.

We must acknowledge the interconnected system of wild harvest, hatchery production, habitat loss/degradation, poor ocean conditions, and climate change. These factors work synergistically, not in isolation, and are having detrimental effects on our already-depleted wild salmon and steelhead stocks, and therefore economies and communities.

Where sufficient data are unavailable to adequately determine the population health in each of the RSP basins, conservation should be prioritized over wild harvest opportunities.

So, in order to protect wild fish in the RSP, I ask the commission to vote for the following alternatives.

Hatchery Management

To minimize risks to the wild fish runs from hatchery fish, I support:

- Wild Fish Emphasis Areas for all South Coast species—including Chinook.
- No permanent hatchery acclimation sites on the Rogue or Chetco Rivers.
- No increase from current hatchery releases numbers for any species in any basin.
- Reevaluation of the summer steelhead program and release targets at Cole Rivers hatchery.

Wild Winter Steelhead Harvest

Until adequate data has been collected and clearly shows that wild winter steelhead populations can be sustainably harvested, we should implement the following wild steelhead protocols:

- Catch-and-release for wild winter steelhead in all basins for a five-year interim period.
- Support for electronic licensing, steelhead validation card.
- Support increased hatchery daily bag limits in the Rogue, Chetco, and Elk Rivers to maintain angler opportunities.

Our best chance at thriving together with wild salmon and steelhead into the future, lies in precautionary action now until the critical data gaps are ameliorated.

Sincerely,

Dear Chair Wahl,

Please protect our natural world for the future generations 🙏

I am writing to comment on the October draft of the Rogue-South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan (RSP). The RSP will dictate the management direction for many ecologically important steelhead waters, such as the Sixes, Coquille, Elk, and Rogue Rivers. A plan that prioritizes the long-term health of wild steelhead is necessary when the future is more uncertain than ever due to the impacts of climate change. I encourage you to strongly consider the following comments and suggested changes, as they are provided with the goal of restoring and sustaining wild steelhead abundance in the future.

Angling Alternatives

Thank you for directing the department to include a catch and release alternative in the final draft of the RSP at the October 25th Commission meeting. In response to the public draft of the RSP published in July, over 2250 people asked the department to implement catch and release regulations until there is adequate adult monitoring data available. Without current adult harvest monitoring, adult mortality, or adequate adult escapement for multiple generations, ODFW does not know the total impact of harvest on wild winter steelhead as a result of directed harvest and catch and release angling. I request the commission direct the department to change regulations to "Catch and Release" for wild winter steelhead on the Rogue and south coast until a five-year review of adequate monitoring data is available to inform harvest management.

Management Triggers and Actions

The conservation status for all species has been indicated in the plan. The conservation status for Winter Steelhead on the south coast will be identified by juvenile occupancy. The Department did not provide examples of a management agency that successfully utilizes juveniles as a health indicator to evaluate overall population health or as a mechanism to take action to reverse species in decline. I ask that the department utilize adult spawner escapement from newly instated south coast spawning surveys after five years of plan implementation. The conservation triggers in the draft RSP don't respond quickly enough to fish population decline. The Commission Draft RSP states action will be taken when a two year average is below conservation status, which is not adequate. When identified populations dip below conservation status in a single year, action needs to take place. Second, the plan must commit the Department to take action when populations reach an identified trigger similar to the Rogue Fall Chinook SMU Conservation Management plan, e.g. angling regulation changes, hatchery program changes, and habitat action changes.

Lastly, I request ODFW provide the following fundamental data on population health to manage species indicated in the plan:

- Adult spawner escapement in each watershed
- Juvenile measurements correlated to adult escapement in each watershed
- Effects of harvest (mandatory reporting of all harvest and catch and release)
- Effects of hatcheries (pHOS)

Hatchery Actions

The current RSP provides a suite of actions that increase hatchery expansion throughout the Rogue and south coast. I request that the department does not include any hatchery expansion in the RSP by making the following changes to the draft plan:

- Eliminate the newly proposed Euchre Creek and Winchuck River Mixed Emphasis Areas
- Eliminate offsite hatchery releases in the Rogue River
- Eliminate increased ESA listed Coho releases in the Rogue River
- Decrease smolt outputs to reach mitigation goals in the Rogue basin

I appreciate the opportunity to provide comment on the final draft of the RSP. I urge you to take a cautious management approach in a time when climate change makes it extremely difficult to predict trends in abundance and productivity. For wild steelhead to persist in numbers that can support fisheries in the future, a management approach that is informed by accurate and timely data needs to be taken. This type of management will sustain the long-term health of wild steelhead. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Dear Chair Wahl,

To me, it is a very obvious decision to switch to catch-and-release angling for wild steelhead. With so many influences like angling pressure, ocean conditions, commercial by-catch, etc. it seems like switching to catch-and-release only for wild steelhead is the least that can be done until there is enough information to say that angler harvest of wild steelhead isn't having an impact on the declining run sizes. With how many people's livelihoods and how much of an economic impact steelhead season has, it would be a shame to watch it disappear because a lack of research.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments to the Commission on the October draft of the Rogue South Coast Multi-Species Conservation Management Plan (RSP). A plan centered around conservation and the long term health of identified species is critical to the future of these fish, the rivers, and the communities of southern Oregon. The following comments, concerns, and suggested changes are provided to ensure the conservation and future health of the identified species. I am deeply concerned the department did not consider public comments during the public comment period and has failed to provide the commission with the same suite of alternatives for discussion and consideration.

Angling Alternatives

In response to the public draft of the RSP published in July, over 2,260 people asked the department to implement catch and release regulations until there is adequate adult monitoring. The Commission Draft, provided as Attachment 3 for Exhibit 3 of the October 15, 2021 Commission meeting, does not provide the commission with any alternatives for angling opportunities and does not propose catch and release for wild steelhead. I am very concerned that the department did not listen to the public and did not take their comments into consideration. Without current adult harvest monitoring, adult mortality, or adequate adult escapement for multiple generations, ODFW does not know the total impact of harvest on wild winter steelhead as a result of directed harvest and catch and release angling. I request the commission direct the department to change regulations to "Catch and Release" for wild winter steelhead on the Rogue and south coast until a five-year review of adequate monitoring data is available to inform harvest management.

Management Triggers and Actions

The conservation status for all species has been indicated in the plan. The conservation status for Winter Steelhead on the south coast will be identified by juvenile occupancy. The Department did not provide examples of a management agency that successfully utilizes juveniles as a health indicator to evaluate overall population health or as a mechanism to take action to reverse species in decline. I ask that the department utilize adult spawner escapement from newly instated south coast spawning surveys after five years of plan implementation.

The conservation triggers in the draft RSP don't respond quickly enough to fish population decline. The Commission Draft RSP states action will be taken when a two year average is below conservation status, which is not adequate. When identified populations dip below conservation status in a single year, action needs to take place. Second, the plan must commit the Department to take action when populations reach an identified trigger similar to the Rogue Fall Chinook SMU Conservation Management plan, e.g. angling regulation changes, hatchery program changes, and habitat action changes.

Lastly, I request ODFW provide the following fundamental data on population health to manage species indicated in the plan:

- Adult spawner escapement in each watershed
- Juvenile measurements correlated to adult escapement in each watershed
- Effects of harvest (mandatory reporting of all harvest and catch and release)
- Effects of hatcheries (pHOS)

Hatchery Actions

The current RSP provides a suite of actions that increase hatchery expansion throughout the Rogue and south coast.

I request that the department does not include any hatchery expansion in the RSP by making the following changes to the draft plan:

- Eliminate the newly proposed Euchre Creek and Winchuck River Mixed Emphasis Areas
- Eliminate offsite hatchery releases in the Rogue River
- Eliminate increased ESA listed Coho releases in the Rogue River
- Decrease smolt outputs to reach mitigation goals in the Rogue basin

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments on the Commission Draft of the RSP. Critical data and monitoring will be necessary to inform management of wild winter steelhead harvest on the Rogue and South Coast. Until that monitoring is in place and data available, I ask the Department to continue to provide the opportunity for catch and release angling for wild winter steelhead on the Rogue and south coast watersheds and harvest in the interim on hatchery origin stocks. These changes will provide the precautionary conservation management necessary to help restore and sustain wild abundance.

Sincerely,

Matt Thornton

Subject: Take Action: Conserve Wild Fish on Oregon's South Coast

Dear ODFW Commission,

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments on the Rogue/South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan (RSP). I grew up in Gold Beach Oregon so the Rogue River is very important to me.

Southwest Oregon is home to beautiful, globally unique watersheds like the Rogue, Illinois, and Chetco Rivers. Productive habitats and wild fish runs power local economies and are an important part of Southwest Oregon communities. Due to low steelhead returns this year, we saw emergency fishing closures on the Deschutes, John Day, and North Umpqua Rivers. These closures caused considerable economic and recreational loss. We are committed to preventing this from occurring in the RSP area through precautionary management.

Key steps to safeguarding the region's wild fish—and the economies and communities that depend on them—include catch-and-release for wild winter steelhead during a five-year data collection period, robust population monitoring, and cautious management of wild fish emphasis areas.

Managing wild fish in a precautionary manner will not only help keep southern Oregon salmon and steelhead off the Endangered Species List, but will also set the region up to better withstand the climate shocks that we know are coming—and that, in some cases, are already here. The localized effects of climate change adds considerable uncertainty to our sense of how well these populations will adapt and survive in a warmer, dryer future. We must acknowledge that wild harvest, hatchery production, habitat loss/degradation, poor ocean conditions, and climate change all work synergistically, not in isolation, and are having detrimental effects on our already-depleted wild salmon and steelhead stocks.

Where sufficient data are unavailable to adequately determine the population health in each of the RSP basins, conservation should be prioritized over wild harvest opportunities.

In order to protect wild fish in the RSP, I ask the commission to vote for the following alternatives.

Hatchery Management

To minimize risks to the wild fish runs from hatchery fish, I support:

- Wild Fish Emphasis Areas for all South Coast species—including Chinook.
- No permanent hatchery acclimation sites on the Rogue or Chetco Rivers.
- No increase from current hatchery releases numbers for any species in any basin.
- Reevaluation of the summer steelhead program and release targets at Cole Rivers hatchery.

Wild Winter Steelhead Harvest

Until adequate data has been collected and clearly shows that wild winter steelhead populations can be sustainably harvested, we should implement the following wild steelhead protocols:

- Catch-and-release for wild winter steelhead in all basins for a five-year interim period.
- Support for electronic licensing, steelhead validation card.

- Support increased hatchery daily bag limits in the Rogue, Chetco, and Elk Rivers to maintain angler opportunities.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide my comments to the commission. We urge commissioners to manage these precious resources cautiously until the critical data gaps are ameliorated. Our best chance to have thriving wild salmon and steelhead populations in the future, is to act now.

Sincerely,

Mr. Jeffrey White

Dear Chair Wahl,

As an avid outdoorsman and steelhead angler of the PNW I endorse the suggestions below - there is simply no justification to allow harvest of wild steelhead in the absence of sufficient data to ensure the continued health of this magnificent species.

I am writing to comment on the October draft of the Rogue-South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan (RSP). The RSP will dictate the management direction for many ecologically important steelhead waters, such as the Sixes, Coquille, Elk, and Rogue Rivers. A plan that prioritizes the long-term health of wild steelhead is necessary when the future is more uncertain than ever due to the impacts of climate change. I encourage you to strongly consider the following comments and suggested changes, as they are provided with the goal of restoring and sustaining wild steelhead abundance in the future.

Angling Alternatives

Thank you for directing the department to include a catch and release alternative in the final draft of the RSP at the October 25th Commission meeting. In response to the public draft of the RSP published in July, over 2250 people asked the department to implement catch and release regulations until there is adequate adult monitoring data available. Without current adult harvest monitoring, adult mortality, or adequate adult escapement for multiple generations, ODFW does not know the total impact of harvest on wild winter steelhead as a result of directed harvest and catch and release angling. I request the commission direct the department to change regulations to "Catch and Release" for wild winter steelhead on the Rogue and south coast until a five-year review of adequate monitoring data is available to inform harvest management.

I appreciate the opportunity to provide comment on the final draft of the RSP. I urge you to take a cautious management approach in a time when climate change makes it extremely difficult to predict trends in abundance and productivity. For wild steelhead to persist in numbers that can support fisheries in the future, a management approach that is informed by accurate and timely data needs to be taken. Dear Chair Wahl,

With wild stocks of steelhead on the decline all up and down the west coast I don't see how allowing the take of wild steelhead on any river is even remotely responsible. Clearly the issue is bigger than most realize and global environmental issues affect every corner of the globe. Preemptively protecting the South Coast wild steelhead might be the only protection that will mean anything towards ensuring they even exist years from now.

Dear ODFW Commission,

I travelled from Cleveland to fish in Oregon this year. I spent three full days on the river with a single steelhead on, briefly. I'm a "catch and release" fly-fisherman, but this was a huge disappointment. Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments on the Rogue/South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan (RSP).

Southwest Oregon is home to beautiful, globally unique watersheds like the Rogue, Illinois, and Chetco Rivers. Productive habitats and wild fish runs power local economies and are an important part of Southwest Oregon communities. Due to low steelhead returns this year, we saw emergency fishing closures on the Deschutes, John Day, and North Umpqua Rivers. These closures caused considerable economic and recreational loss. Key steps to safeguarding the region's wild fish—and the economies and communities that depend on them—include catch-and-release for wild winter steelhead during a five-year data collection period, robust population monitoring, and cautious management of wild fish emphasis areas.

Managing wild fish in a precautionary manner will not only help keep southern Oregon salmon and steelhead off the Endangered Species List, but will also set the region up to better withstand the climate shocks that we know are coming—and that, in some cases, are already here. Dear Chair Wahl,

As an east coast angler, I've dreamed of the days I can fly to the west coast to swing flies for wild steelhead and salmon. Dear Chair Wahl,

Southern Oregon is one of the last places on this planet for us to experience wild places as nature intended. Wild fish are the sole reason why I spend my hard earned money on fishing licenses and throughout the small coastal towns and communities just for a singular chance to interact with these animals. If they continue to be allowed to be killed without proper knowledge of their numbers, myself along with hundreds or thousands of other fisherman will no longer make our way to this area. Please give us faith in our decision makers within management agencies and stop the killing of wild steelhead until it can proven that run health allows for those who wish to take fish can do so without furthering the decreasing numbers of wild fish. Please make the right choice, no matter how difficult it may be, and stop allowing people to kill wild steelhead.

I am writing to comment on the October draft of the Rogue-South Coast Multi-Species Conservation and Management Plan (RSP).
