Subject: Vote to Ban Coyote-Killing Contests in Oregon

Dear Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission,

I urge you to vote “yes” on the petition to prohibit coyote-killing contests in Oregon. These contests are unpopular, violate the state’s duty to protect wildlife for the benefit of all Oregonians, and run counter to science-based wildlife-management principles.

A recent poll by the Remington Research Group found that a strong majority of Oregonians in all five congressional districts support policies to ban coyote-killing contests. This should come as no surprise: Wildlife killing motivated by financial reward is grossly out of step with responsible sportsmanship and Oregon’s respect for wildlife.

Furthermore, the indiscriminate mass killing of coyotes provides zero conservation benefit, failing to effectively reduce coyote populations, minimize conflicts with pets and livestock, or increase numbers of game species. On the contrary, it can disrupt stable coyote family packs and increase their rate of reproduction. (Reminder: The petition doesn’t ban coyote hunting or prevent lethal control of coyotes; it simply ends the competitive killing of coyotes for cash and prizes.)

Eight states — including five in the West (Washington, New Mexico, Arizona, California and Colorado), as well as Maryland, Vermont and Massachusetts — have banned coyote-killing contests. Most have done so through their state wildlife commissions. It’s time for Oregon to do the same. Vote in favor of the petition to ban coyote-killing contests.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
Elan Morin

Commissioner Oregon DFW,

I am an Oregonian and I am emailing to ask that you quickly act to end coyote killing contests in our state.

Coyote killing contests are not reflective of the conservation principles that are important to those of us who call Oregon home and cast our state in a negative light.

These contests do not help to prevent wildlife/livestock conflicts, and many studies have found that such indiscriminate killing can actually compound this problem. Coyotes are social animals and are more likely to biologically overcompensate for these losses and to turn to livestock for an easy meal absent pack dynamics to prevent this.

Coyotes are critically important members of healthy ecosystems and have been found to increase bird biodiversity through their control of prey species.

A recent poll by the Remington Research Group found that a strong majority of Oregonians, in all five congressional districts, support public policy to ban coyote killing contests.

Eight states, including five in the west—Washington, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Colorado—as well as Maryland, Vermont and Massachusetts have banned these killing contests, primarily through their state wildlife commissions. It is time for Oregon to join other states that have banned coyote killing contests. Please accept the proposed petition to prohibit wasteful coyote killing contests.

Thank you for your consideration.

Subject: Please ban cruel coyote killing contests in Oregon

Dear Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife commissioners,

As an Oregon resident, I care deeply about preventing cruelty to animals and supporting environmental protection efforts.

I am aware that Oregon is considering a ban on coyote killing contests, cruel and gruesome events in which competitors kill as many coyotes as possible during a specified time period for cash and other prizes.

I strongly support this effort, and I hope that you will accept the proposed petition to ban coyote killing contests.

By joining eight other U.S. states that have already banned these inhumane events, Oregon will continue to be a leader in animal and environmental protection.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Michael Halloran

Subject: Please Prohibit Coyote Killing Contests

Dear ODFW Commission,

Thank you for reconsidering antiquated coyote killing contests in Oregon. I strongly urge you to please accept the petition and move forward with rulemaking to prohibit these indiscriminate killing contests in the state.

Studies have found that large-scale coyote killing contests are not an effective tool for minimizing livestock conflict and in fact, actually increase reproduction rates in coyotes. Furthermore, recent polling by the Remington Research Group revealed that a majority of Oregonians from all across the state support policies that put an end to these contests once and for all.

It's time for Oregon to join the eight other states, including five from the West, that have already banned them. Please accept this petition today.

Thank you,

Sincerely,
Mr. Jordan Johnstone

Re: SUPPORT for petition for rulemaking to prohibit coyote killing contests in Oregon

Dear Members of the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission,

On behalf of our Oregon members and supporters, the Humane Society Wildlife Land Trust requests your support for the petition for rulemaking to prohibit coyote killing contests in Oregon.

The Wildlife Land Trust has 117 sanctuaries across the U.S. and Canada that span more than 21,085 acres, including our largest property in Lake County, Oregon. We work to permanently preserve and connect habitat, protecting the homes of all species of wildlife. And each of those species, including native carnivores like coyotes, play their own, uniquely important role in maintaining a healthy ecosystem. Coyotes provide trophic cascade benefits such as indirectly protecting ground-nesting birds from smaller carnivores and increasing the biological diversity of plant and wildlife communities.¹ By keeping rodent populations in check, coyotes also help to protect crops and control tick-borne diseases such as Lyme.

In addition to our work to protect wildlife habitat, we strive to create a world in which wild animals are respected for their intrinsic value and humane solutions are sought to human-wildlife conflicts. Scientific studies have amply demonstrated that the random killing of coyotes, such as in these killing contests, is not an effective method of mitigating potential conflicts with livestock, pets, and humans. In fact, it can increase problems. By disrupting the stable and limiting breeding structure of coyote packs, more reproduction will occur—resulting in more coyotes than there were to begin with. USDA studies have also found that the random killing of non-predating coyotes, who were living in proximity to livestock herds and not causing problems, can trigger conflicts where there were none previously.² Nonlethal livestock protection methods, including the use of fencing, fladry, guard animals, and birthing sheds, have proven very effective in preventing conflicts with wild carnivore species.³

With all of this in mind, the Oregon members and supporters of the Humane Society Wildlife Land Trust ask that you enter this petition into the rulemaking process. Thank you.

Dear Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission,

Please support the wildlife petition on December 16th that will stop the inhumane and unsportsman-like coyote killing contests in Oregon. There are other much more effective and less heinous ways to manage coyote populations, and these wildlife killing contests send the wrong message to people about how to hunt in a respectful and responsible way.

Thank you very much for your consideration,

Hello,

I live on a rural property near the Mount Hood Parkdale area, and I would like to support the initiative to ban coyote killing contests. In my experience, this does not have any substantive impact on mitigating potential issues with our livestock or domesticated pets. Rather, to the contrary; indiscriminate killing of coyotes upsets the balanced local ecosystem and creates opportunity for "bad actor" coyotes. Predator management is best handled on a case by case basis.

Please ban this counterproductive activity, and please let me know if you'd like more information from me as to why this activity should no longer be permitted.

Kind regards,
Michael Poor

Dear Chair Wahl and Commissioners:

At your meeting on Dec. 16 you have the opportunity to end the unjustifiable killing festivals represented by coyote killing contests.

In addition to the scientific evidence that these unsavory events provide zero benefits to game populations and livestock husbandry, in addition to the polls that show most Oregonians disapprove of these utterly unsportsmanlike hunts, in addition to the fact that there is a permanent open-season on all kinds of coyote hunting, killing and trapping, and in addition to the ODFW duty to safeguard wildlife for the benefit of all Oregonians, I add the ethical obligation of individuals in positions of power to protect all wildlife from egregiously cruel, unnecessary, mercenary, and sometimes politically motivated treatment.

Please accept this petition and bring these repulsive contests to an end.

Hello,

I'd like it recorded and known that I, an Oregon resident and outdoorsman, DO NOT support this proposed petition. I consider myself a conservationist, and I view sound science and "best management practices" as of the utmost importance. This petition is driven by heart felt opinion and anti hunting agenda.

This petition states one minority study regarding the affects of predator removal. There have been many studies done showing inconclusive to varying results among predator populations throughout the US, showing predator removal is very circumstantial, and necessary in some habitats and instances. Central and Eastern Oregon have been in the midst of a Mule Deer crisis, and lack of predator control is one hypothesis as to why. Coyote populations are ever growing and expanding. Farmers, ranchers, and land managers are spending an ever increasing amount of money on predator removal. Please listen to sound science on this topic, NOT anti hunting agenda.

As a state certified Trapper, hunter, and outdoor enthusiast, I consider myself a wildlife steward. As a trapper, I regularly work, free of charge, with farmers experiencing livestock depredation during the calving season. I regularly volunteer with ODFW, recently assisting on spotlight surveys and an ongoing Chum salmon re-introduction project in the northwest corner of the state.

Feel free to reach out to me.

Kind Regards,

RE: i) The petition submitted to the Wildlife Commission by 15 non-governmental organizations requesting the commission promulgate rules to prohibit “coyote killing contests” in Oregon; ii) The letter submitted by Oregon senators and representatives supporting the petition, and iii) The reams of form letters requesting that the Wildlife Commission prohibit the “mass” and “inhumane” killing of coyotes that occurs during the “killing contests.”

Dear Chair Mary Wahl and Commission Members:

1. The coyote is not listed as a “game” animal, or a threatened or endangered species; therefore, the coyote has not been regulated relative to the “how, when, where, or why” it can be taken. The only regulations listed by ODFW regarding the take of coyotes, other than having a valid hunting license, are: i) no night hunting, ii) no use of artificial light, iii) no baiting, and iv) no use of electric rifle scopes.

The Wildlife Commission should not make a decision to regulate the “how” by prohibiting contests without full legislative approval. The letter submitted by the congressional members was not approval by the Oregon legislature; it was solely the personal opinion of like-minded legislators.

2. The proponents of the petition support their position with the statement that “indiscriminate, mass killing of coyotes does not reduce conflicts with livestock, or pets, or increase game animals.”

The letter to the commission by the senators and representatives included the statement that “more than 1000 coyotes have been killed in Oregon in these contests over the last 4-years, and more than 10 such contests have been held.” Those numbers indicate that killing contests had an approximate take average of 250 coyotes per/year, or an approximate take average of 100 coyotes/contest. These figures do not indicate that “indiscriminate, mass killing” has occurred, especially since coyote populations have significantly increased since poisons (1080) were banned in 1972. Currently, coyote populations are continuing to expand in Oregon and the other 48 states.

Coyote conflicts with livestock, especially the taking of lambs from range sheep operations, has been on-going throughout Oregon and the western US since the late 1800s. Coyote predation on sheep, along with current predation activities of i) semi-protected (I.e., mountain lions and black bear), ii) protected (wolves), and iii) the lack of predator population controls, has serious implications for both the range sheep industry and farm flocks. It is probable that the industry would have failed completely without services provided by the Wildlife Services Division of the Oregon Department of Agriculture and introduction of guard dogs, at considerable cost to the livestock owner. Both Wildlife Services and guard dogs provide the lethal services that are needed at specific times and places to protect livestock from predator depredation during critical events in the annual livestock cycle

It is probable that most coyote take of livestock occurs during and following parturition. This is also True of coyote take of ungulate wildlife, especially mule deer. Oregon's Mule Deer Management Plan (ODFW. 2003) states that "the most significant predators of mule deer in Oregon are coyotes and cougars. Coyotes feed primarily on small animals, carrion and vegetation but will also prey on deer, especially fawns". The Steen's Mountain Mule Deer study in Harney County during the 1970s found that coyotes were the most significant cause of fawn mortality during their first year of life. Since this study occurred, the Mule Deer population has been in decline throughout Eastern Oregon. Although this decline has been caused by a number of adverse factors, predation by carnivore predators, including coyotes, has significantly contributed to the decline.

Conclusion:

1. The Oregon legislature and/or the Oregon Dept. of Agriculture should determine if contests that involve killing coyotes should be discontinued.
2. Banning coyote contests based on the proposition that contests involve "mass killing" and is "not humane" has no relation to the issue of a coyote contest.
3. Coyote contests staged at the right time and place can have a beneficial impact relative to relieving depredation pressure on livestock and wildlife.

RE: VETERINARY PROFESSIONAL SUPPORT FOR A RULE TO PROHIBIT COYOTE KILLING CONTESTS IN OREGON

Dear Chair Mary Wahl and Commissioners:

Veterinary professionals are stewards of animal welfare. Within the scope of our daily practice, we seek to minimize the pain and potential suffering that may befall our patients.

In light of the animal welfare and ethical issues that arise from coyote killing contests, we, the undersigned Oregon veterinary professionals, write in strong support of a rule to prohibit these competitions statewide. Indiscriminately killing unlimited numbers of coyotes for prizes and entertainment is fundamentally inhumane.

It is difficult to imagine a more callous disregard for animal suffering than that displayed during coyote killing contests, when participants vie for cash and prizes for killing the most, the heaviest, or sometimes even the smallest coyotes within a specified time period.

Coyote killing contests serve no purpose. They are done with disregard for modern wildlife management science, which indicates that ecosystems are disrupted when many animals in a localized area are indiscriminately removed. Participants in the competitions claim they are aiding coyote population control. However, wildlife science research shows that although numbers may temporarily decline, coyotes ultimately experience an increase in their numbers after such removal, resulting from decreased competition for mates and resources, among other factors. The Oregon Fish and Wildlife Department has found that, "Prevention is always the best medicine when it comes to avoiding, minimizing or correcting problems with coyotes."

Coyotes are valuable members of the wildlife community. ODFW says, "Coyotes play an important role in the food chain by controlling mice, rats and other rodents and scavenging on dead wildlife that otherwise could spread disease." It has noted that coyotes help reduce gopher and geese populations, which is beneficial in urban areas and on agricultural lands, and that coyotes prey on feral cats who harm songbird numbers.

The other cash-competitive blood sports involving animals, such as dogfighting and cockfighting, are among the most condemned of all animal welfare violations nationally. Consequently, they have strong laws and penalties against them in all 50 states.

In summary, coyote killing contests are cruel, wasteful, and harmful to our ecosystems. They do not reflect the values or wildlife appreciation enthusiasm of most Oregonians, nor do they comport with our state's ethical hunting principles of sportsmanship and fair chase. With this in mind, we respectfully ask you to end these inhumane contests in Oregon.

We applaud and thank the Commissioners for continuing to evaluate the standards and regulations with objective measures. We compel you to make the necessary changes to adhere to the basic standards of animal welfare and conservancy.

In regards to the proposal to ban Coyote killing contests, it would seem that ODFW has more important issues to be addressed. Like making the website user- friendly, for one!

I have never competed in a "Coyote killing contest", nor am I likely to do so, but now we have another example of west side liberals and outside liberal groups making another attempt to force their views down the throats of rural Oregonians. It always seems that the people that are inclined to know the least, scream the loudest! These groups DON'T understand wildlife, farming, ranching, our history, our morals or ethics, OR ANYTHING pertaining to rural Oregon!

I, for one, (but hardly alone) would hope the ODFW would tell these groups to stop being governed by their own blind empathy and start learning how to think instead of "feel"!!

I don't make comments to issues like this but rural Oregon is getting trampled by the Portland woke crowd and now is the time to start speaking up!

I hope the ODFW does the right thing!

When word got out that this has been going on for several years the hunters asked why it was happening and the federal government said it was to get coyote population down! So the hunters in the hunting groups went to the state of Oregon, and also in California and Nevada and asked if they the hunters could go out and do this job for the federal government! All said, and done the federal government, quit killing coyotes from the air, using the helicopter and allow the hunters to go out and do this work for them!! If we stop as hunters in Oregon then the federal government will go back and do the same and they were doing!! So I say NO to Ban!!!

This is absolutely not scientific management having these coyote killing contests. The data are in. Predator killing contests do not serve to protect livestock or human safety. They are a poor tool for wildlife management and promote wildlife slaughter as a ruthless human game, but not respectful game management.

Oregon's entire management approach to coyotes is flawed. It treats them not as a resource, but as vermin that can be slaughtered year round without limits. What is the point in that?

Most Oregonians value and appreciate watchable wildlife and coyotes are watchable wildlife.

You can do better than predator derbies. Stop allowing ruthless killing to appease the loudest complainers. Wildlife management should be science driven, not complaint driven. It's time for ODFW to abandon the cultural mindset of USDA-APHIS.

Misguided agricultural special interests should not lead your approach to wildlife.

RE: Coyote Derby Petition

The Natural Resource Advisory Committee (NRAC) wish to express our opposition to the proposed petition before the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission. The petitioners, calling our local coyote derbies "killing contests" are an obvious attempt to cast a negative slant on the events and its participants. The derbies are not at all as they are being portrayed. Many of the teams are comprised of family members spending time in the outdoors hunting together. It is not uncommon to see father – daughter teams or even teams with mothers and their children. The derbies are in no way a blood thirsty, uncaring event.

The sportsmen who compete in coyote derbies are avid hunters who participate to showcase their hunting prowess, while enhancing the survivability of game species by reducing the predator load. These sportsmen employ the same hunting techniques in the derbies that they use all year long, whether they are pursuing predators or game species. Derby participants are actually incentivized to ensure a quick and humane kill in order to retrieve the animal for the derbies. These derbies are also timed to provide the most benefit to livestock and wildlife by reducing the predator population at the most beneficial time of year. There are many clear economic benefits to minimize predators on livestock and wildlife populations. Benefits are so clear that even with the positive effect provided by recreational predator hunting and coyote derbies, landowners are willing to pay for helicopter control and wildlife agent control of coyotes to help mitigate their impact.

The estimated immediate economic impact of a single derby held in Harney County is between $250,000 and $300,000. Our local businesses, especially restaurants, motels, fuel vendors, sporting goods stores, grocery and convenient stores, receive a huge increase in business due to the derbies. This comes at a very slow time of year for these small businesses and helps pull them through until spring.

Three attempts to pass statutes legislatively to end coyote derbies over the past few sessions have failed to gain traction and have died. We as a committee serving the Harney County Court have been opposed to these attempts. We see the petitioner's current effort as an attempt to bypass the legislative process and use the Fish and Wildlife Commission, who are not elected, but rather appointed by the Governor and who clearly do not have the appropriate authority to make such a decision.

By the petitioner's own admission, page 5 and 6 of petition state the requested new rule would do nothing to "prescribe limitations on the times, places or amounts" for the taking of "predatory animals". It is clear the petitioner's grievance is about their dislike of the optics of coyote derbies. Make no mistake; the vast majority of coyotes taken in the derbies will be taken by the same means by our local government trapper and others, including air operations. The same coyotes that would be taken in the derbies will be taken by other entities, but with associated expenses. Coyote derbies provide the same end result, only with no expense to any agency or individual other than derby participants. As there will be no appreciable difference in numbers taken, the studies and opinions expressed in the petition should be viewed as moot points. The arguments used to support passage of the petition are not applicable, considering the take will be relatively the same.

Furthermore, ORS 610-005 states the Oregon Department of Agriculture administers the "laws for the destruction, eradication or control of predatory animals". ORS 496.162 (3) states the Commission cannot set regulation on the "times, places or amounts" of take for predatory animals.

In closing, the Harney County Natural Resource Advisory Committee urges the Commission to take no action on the petitioner's request before them regarding coyote derbies.

Respectfully submitted,

I am writing to say I'm completely opposed to any coyote hunting or trapping program. Every state in the the region has discontinued this practice and for good reason. Its inhumane and frankly in direct opposition to the goal of reducing coyote numbers. It is well established that killing coyotes induces them to produce more pups to make up for the reduction in numbers. The idea that predators are bad and prey are good is so out of date. Coyotes are good predators who keep rodents in check.

I'm a native Oregonian and cannot believe the state I cherish is still involved in this heinous practice of "culling" coyotes. It's time to follow good science. Subject: Upcoming meeting concerning hunting contests

Good evening- I understand that on 12/16 your commission will be discussing potentially banning coyote hunting contests. A similar ban was proposed during a recent session of the Oregon legislature. Surprising no one, all of the legislative sponsors were from the Portland area, and none had any personal experience with hunting in general, and predator hunting in particular. Coyotes are currently an unregulated species, with numbers meeting or exceeding historic levels. In fact, their numbers now are actually higher than in pre-Columbian times. ODFW staff can confirm this, and indeed, I'm guessing you've already been presented with- and presumably considered- population data. The ban is proposed by anti-hunting organizations without any backing from science. Their viewpoint is agenda-driven, with a goal of chipping away at our hunting rights. In the long history of the self-determination and personal choice of our state's citizens, the best resolution is this: if you don't like coyote hunting contests, don't participate in them; it really is as simple as that.

Thanks for your time.

Re: Petition to ban coyote contests

Chair Wahl, Members of the Commission, Director Melcher,

The undersigned County Commissioners oppose the petition recently submitted to Oregon Department of Fish & Wildlife (ODFW) and request the Commission deny the petition.

The petitioners have presented the argument that the Commission can and should approve a ban on coyote contests based on ORS 496.012 which states the commission is to 'make decisions that allow for the best social, economic, and recreational utilization of the wildlife resources by all user groups.' Aside from the fact that this statute speaks directly to wildlife management goals and does not grant the Commission regulatory authority of predatory animals, the petitioners have, in their invocation of this statute, highlighted the flaw in their own request.

The petitioners have not addressed, nor asked the Commission to address, a specific sector of the 'user groups' included in ORS 496.012: those directly affected by coyote depredation of crops and livestock. Nor have the petitioners address the economics of such a ban, either for the producers who bear to the cost of lost livestock and/or crops or for the local communities who benefit from the economic boost that accompany contests.

The statements brought forth in the petition are derivative of organizations based solely on social acceptance within a narrowly focused 'user group' as the measurement of what is deemed approvable. The petitioners are requesting an entire sector of the state, and the 'user group' most effected by predatory animal damage, be marginalized based on their disapproval of a legal activity meant to assist landowners in dealing with predatory animal damage and providing income to local economies.

As stated previously, the Commission must also examine the scope of its authority to regulate predatory animals. ORS 610.005 clearly puts that authority in the jurisdiction of the State Department of Agriculture (ODA). ODA's authority as the regulating body has been upheld each of the three times this issue has been brought to the legislative body and dismissed.

Given the Commission's lack of authority on this matter, and the insufficient information regarding the economic impacts on producers and local communities, we urge the Commission to deny the petition.

Chair Wahl and Members of the Commission,

I am writing in support of the petition to finally put an end to the ecologically offensive coyote killing contests in our state.

PLEASE REDACT MY EMAIL ADDRESS AND CONTACT INFORMATION. Thank you!

I have been a resident of Tillamook County since 1985 and witnessed first hand the consequences of misguided hunting contests sponsored by local sporting goods stores. The objective of these contests has been to increase hunting opportunity by increasing deer and elk populations. It is abundantly clear that these efforts have failed miserably here in our county.

More importantly, the mass killing of coyotes has disrupted the local ecology to the point that rodents and other prey populations have soared. In many cases this is causing significant economic harm since Mountain Beaver are a serious nuisance for state, federal and private reforestation efforts. This is but one example of many.

Finally, landowners who experience livestock depredation have tools at their disposal, including additional hunting tags, to deal with what are arguably minor incidents of depredation by coyotes. Our German Shepherd dogs have proven quite effective at keeping all predators at bay.

I see the agenda has requested we provide alternatives that reduce negative impacts on businesses that support unsportsmanlike like conduct. I am sorry to say that there are no alternatives that exist and question why these people deserve such a special favor in the first place? Why do I as a landowner have to endure increased trapping costs so as to avoid alleged economic harm to a local store owner who is causing harm to me?

I agree wholeheartedly with former OFWC Commission Chair Finley that "(k)illing large numbers of predators as part of an organized contest or competition is inconsistent with sound, science-based wildlife management and antithetical to the concepts of sportsmanship and fair chase."

Thank you for considering my comments.

Subject: Reform Oregon's cruel and inhumane trap check requirements

Hello.

I'd like to comment on this if it's not too late as it was just brought to my attention. It would be good to see the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission step up and adopt consistent and modernized trap check times - times that reduce wildlife suffering. Aren't wildlife suffering enough already? We are systematically taking everything from them already - space to raise families, food, quiet and darkness, the very nature they (and we) need to exist. I digress.

Oregon trap check times are too lax. 24 hours is best practice, for all wildlife. Prioritize staff for this, if that's the issue. Caring about the welfare of animals is important in this regard. This is consistent with what the majority of other forward thinking states already have, as well as recommendations made by the Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies and the American Veterinary Medical Association. The proposed trap check recommendation of up to several days fails to meet the most basic of humane standards and won't reduce animal suffering. Coyotes, beavers, and other wildlife will continue to suffer in traps for up to 14 days, resulting in slow, lingering deaths, from either injuries, starvation, predation or the elements. There is no acceptable reason to leave any animal suffering in a trap for days on end. Please reject the inadequate recommendations to Oregon's trap check times. Is this who we are, really?

And you already know what the American Veterinary Association says about trapping - no conventional steel jawed foothold traps, humane traps to minimize injury if absolutely necessary, as when humans can't come up with anything more kind or thoughtful or creative for their needs.

Please lead on this issue, ODFW Commission. Let's get modern and move with the times! Trap times need to be no more than 24 hours. Even that is brushing against the dark side of human ethics.

Respectfully,
Alenna Sebben

Please support the petition to make rules prohibiting coyote killing contests. Studies have shown that the killing contests do not reduce coyote populations, but instead can cause splintered packs and can actually increase reproduction rates. These contests have also proven to be an ineffective means to reduce conflict with livestock or increase game species. Oregon needs to follow suit with Washington, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Massachusetts, California, and Vermont, and finally stop coyote killing contests. Thank you for your consideration.

Dear Commissioners,

I am writing to urge you to allow for coyote hunting contests to remain as a predator management strategy. Coyotes are one of the most successful breeders of all predators in North America. They successfully live in urban environments as well as in the wild. These contests on the surface appear to harvest in large numbers, but when the square miles covered are considered, they barely make a dent in the local population. Please vote following evidence and the biologists data on populations rather than emotions of the antihunting organizations funded by out of state money and influence. Hunting and fishing tag sales along with hunting and fishing organizations and associations provide the lions share of revenue and volunteer hours in the name of conservation, while there are well organized groups that want to see hunting banned everywhere and don't spend a dime or get in the field for conservation efforts. Please support your constituents.

Commissioner Oregon DFW,

Would you be able to quickly act to end coyote killing contests in our state?

Coyote killing contests cast Oregon in a negative light and are not reflective of our state's conservation principles.

I understand these contests do not help to prevent wildlife/livestock conflicts, and many studies have found that such indiscriminate killing can actually compound this problem.

Coyotes are social animals and are more likely to biologically overcompensate for these losses and to turn to livestock for an easy meal absent pack dynamics to prevent this.

Coyotes are critically important members of healthy ecosystems and have been found to increase bird biodiversity through their control of prey species.

A recent poll by the Remington Research Group found that a strong majority of Oregonians, in all five congressional districts, support public policy to ban coyote killing contests.

Eight states, including five in the west—Washington, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Colorado—as well as Maryland, Vermont and Massachusetts have banned these killing contests, primarily through their state wildlife commissions. It is time for Oregon to join these states and ban coyote killing contests.

Thank you for your consideration.

As an Oregon citizen I am writing to urge you not to allow coyote killing contests. This mindless practice does nothing to alleviate wildlife problems and promotes animal cruelty. When we live in balance with our state's wildlife we benefit from the harmony of living with nature and the wild animals benefit by being allowed to survive.

We have quite a few coyotes living in the field behind the homes in our neighborhood and virtually everyone expresses delight listening to them and catching sight of coyotes in the morning. Nobody complains about them being problems and indeed, we would grieve to see more and more of them wiped out to entertain the bloodlust of wildlife hunters. Killing these lovely animals does nothing to benefit humans: we don't want them for food, and consequently destroying them is purely sadistic.

Dear Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife commissioners,

As an Oregon resident, I care deeply about preventing cruelty to animals and supporting environmental protection efforts.

I am aware that Oregon is considering a ban on coyote killing contests, cruel and gruesome events in which competitors kill as many coyotes as possible during a specified time period for cash and other prizes.

I strongly support this effort, and I hope that you will adopt the proposed rule to ban coyote killing contests.

By joining eight other U.S. states that have already banned these inhumane events, Oregon will continue to be a leader in animal and environmental protection.

Thank you for your consideration.

Subject: Support of Petition Banning Coyote Killing Contests

Dear Chairwoman Wahl and Commissioners:

I write to urge you to accept the Petition to Ban Coyote Killing Contests and direct staff to begin rule making to implement such a ban. My rationale for banning these contests are based in ethics, principles of scientific-based wildlife management and to maintain ODFW's reputation as a progressive fish and wildlife agency. I have recently retired as a wildlife ecologist and professor from the Department of Fisheries, Wildlife, and Conservation Sciences at Oregon State University after a 32-year career. I am a life-time member and former President of the Oregon Chapter of The Wildlife Society and have served as the Northwest Section Representative to The Wildlife Society. Furthermore, I am a former Fish and Wildlife Commissioner and served as Chair of the Commission for three years.

Coyote killing contests are unethical, plain, and simple! These contests glorify killing coyotes for the sole purpose of killing and are antithetical to the concepts of fair chase and sportsmanship. This unethical behavior puts all of Oregon's hunters in a bad light and has the potential to turn a large segment of the Oregon public against legitimate hunting. One of the tenants of the North American Model of Wildlife Conservation is that wildlife should only be killed for a legitimate purpose. The ODFW have made numerous decisions over the years based on fair chase and sportsmanship considerations, including elk farming prohibition on sale of animals for hunting, primitive weapons regulations that prevent these weapons from having high tech capabilities, and hunting animals over bait. Trust your gut on this, if it sounds disgusting, it probably is!

There are no valid wildlife management objectives to be achieved by coyote killing contests. The important role that these predators play in the ecosystem is well documented. Blaming predators for declines in prey populations grossly over-simplifies complex ecological relationships and only serves to distract ODFW and its constituents from other important solutions such as habitat management or landscape-level conservation practices. Coyotes and other predators do cause problems for agricultural producers and the public, but a widely accepted principle of predator manage is the removal of the offending animal(s). Coyote killing contests result in indiscriminate removal of animals most of which do not pose a threat to livestock, pets or Oregon's game animals. Furthermore, culling of coyote populations results in compensatory reproduction and a subsequent increase in population growth rates. Thus, coyote killing contests will not achieve any predator management objectives.

Finally, I believe banning coyote killing contests is essential for ODFW to maintain its well-deserved reputation as a progressive fish and wildlife management agency. These contests have been banned in at least eight other states including five in the West. The available public records suggest that the primary rational for the bans were ethics and science-based wildlife management. These contests are old school. It is time to move on. I urge the Commission to accept the petition and instruct staff to begin rule making.

Respectively submitted,

Subject: Support for Petition to Ban Coyote Killing Contests in Oregon

Dear Chair Wahl and Members of Commission:

My name is Michael Sutton, and I served as President of the California Fish & Game Commission in 2014 when we enacted a statewide ban on all wildlife killing contests. I'm writing to ask for your support of a rule to similarly end coyote killing contests in Oregon.

I have spent more than a decade in government service, as a special agent with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and as a park ranger with the National Park Service in Yosemite, Yellowstone, Biscayne, Death Valley, and Virgin Islands National Parks. I'm also a lifelong hunter and avid fisherman.

As president of the California Fish and Game Commission at the time when the state was considering this issue, I said, "Awarding prizes for wildlife killing contests is both unethical and inconsistent with our current understanding of natural systems. Such contests are an anachronism and have no place in modern wildlife management." The science is clear that predator control—killing predators to prevent conflicts with livestock, pets, and humans, or other game species—does not work.

But I'd also like to share some perspectives from other state wildlife management agencies, commissions, and professionals:

- Kelly Susewind, director of Washington State Department of Fish and Wildlife: "[P]art of my job, and frankly part of my soul, is to promote hunting, to get our youth hunting, to really have this be a core piece of what our society supports. And frankly, that job is a lot harder if we're condoning these types of contests, and for that reason, I personally support this language."¹
- Commissioner Brad Smith, Washington State Fish and Wildlife Commission: "I am a hunter, I'll clarify that, and I've never perceived hunting as a contest. I think these are not hunting contests, they're killing contests." He went on to state that, "I'm concerned about the demise of the hunting tradition, I'm concerned about the demise of the number of youth going into hunting and fishing. . . . What is going to help that number go down even faster and further is the image of a pile of dead critters out there. . . . This is a case of, we are actually shooting ourselves in the foot to allow that sort of thing."²
- Arizona Game & Fish Commission: "To the extent these contests reflect on the overall hunting community, public outrage with these events has the potential to threaten hunting as a legitimate wildlife management function."³
- Jim Zieler, hunter and former chair of the Arizona Game & Fish Commission: "There has been a lot of social outcry against this, and you can kind of understand why. It's difficult to stand up and defend a practice like this. It's just not enough to say, 'Science will tell us it doesn't have a significant impact on the predator population.'"⁴

- Dan Gibbs, hunter and executive director of Colorado Department of Natural Resources: "For me, hunting contests don't sit well. As a sportsman I'd never participate in one personally. Hunting is an important reverent tradition in Colorado and powerful management tool but I also think wildlife killing contests give sportsmen and sportswomen a bad name and damage our reputation."⁵
- Tony Wasley, hunter, director of Nevada Department of Wildlife, and former president of the Association of Fish & Wildlife Agencies: "Killing contests are ethically upsetting by virtue for most members of society. Hunting should not be a competition as such behavior ultimately degrades the value of life and undermines respect for the animals being hunted."⁶
- Ray Powell, former New Mexico Commissioner of State Lands: "The non-specific, indiscriminate killing methods used in this commercial and unrestricted coyote killing contest are not about hunting or sound land management. These contests are about personal profit, animal cruelty. ... It is time to outlaw this highly destructive activity."⁷
- Ted Chu, former wildlife manager with Idaho Fish and Game: "Hunting is not a contest and it should never be a competitive activity about who can kill the most or the biggest animals."⁸
- Vermont Fish & Wildlife: "Coyote hunting contests are not only ineffective at controlling coyote populations, but these kinds of competitive coyote hunts are raising concerns on the part of the public and could possibly jeopardize the future of hunting and affect access to private lands for all hunters."⁹
- Virginia Department of Wildlife Resources: "[There is a] misconception that predator killing contests provide benefits to the public and other wildlife species."¹⁰ The agency found "no scientific evidence to support claims that predator hunting contests reduce predator numbers, reduce livestock damage, or increase populations of game species[.]"¹¹ It stated "the primary concern of staff is [the] possible negative effects on public views of hunting in general."¹²
- Massachusetts Division of Fisheries & Wildlife: "[P]ublic controversy over this issue has the potential to threaten predator hunting and undermine public support for hunting in general[.]"¹³
- New Mexico Land Commissioner Stephanie Garcia Richard: "These are not hunting contests. They are animal cruelty contests. It is an inexcusable practice, and today I used my authority to ban organized killing contests of unprotected species on any of the nine million acres of State Trust Land that I am charged with overseeing."¹⁴
- Pennsylvania Game Commission: "After decades of using predator control (such as paying bounties) with no effect, and the emergence of wildlife management as a science, the agency finally accepted the reality that predator control does not work."¹⁵
- West Virginia Department of Natural Resources: "Predator control of coyotes because of wildlife predation is unwarranted and unnecessary. Predator control of coyotes preying on livestock should be restricted to targeted animals."¹⁶
- The New York State Department of Environmental Conservation has pointed out that the random removal of coyotes "...will not: (a) control or reduce coyote populations; (b) reduce or eliminate predation on livestock; or (c) result in an increase in deer densities."¹⁷

- North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission: "Bounties and harvest incentive programs are prone to corruption, expensive, do not increase harvest, and do not target problem animals. Ample evidence from case studies supports the conclusion that these methods are ineffective at reducing conflicts with coyotes or impacting coyote populations." And it adds, "While coyote population reduction ("coyote control") is often the first and only management approach that people suggest, it has proven ineffective."¹⁸
- In a 2014 deer harvest report, the South Carolina Department of Natural Resources concluded that trying to control coyotes to manage predation of deer was ineffective.¹⁹

For all the reasons articulated here, I respectfully ask for your support of a rule to end cruel, wasteful, unsporting, and unscientific coyote killing contests in the state of Oregon.

Sincerely,

Michael Sutton

Stop Coyote-Killing Contests

Please support the petition to ban coyote-killing contests. What a barbaric activity.

There is overwhelming support across the state of Oregon, to stop this awful practice. It simply does not represent most Oregonians and their support for science-based, humane and ethical wildlife management policies.

Studies have shown that the killing contests do not reduce coyote populations, but instead can cause splintered packs and increased reproduction rates. These contests have also proven to be an ineffective means to reduce conflict with livestock or increase game species.

Dear ODFW Commission,

On December 16, I urge the Commission to accept the petition to ban coyote-killing contests in Oregon, and proceed with the rulemaking needed to do so.

Last evening (December 6) on Clackamas County's Government Channel, I watched a seminar conducted by a wildlife specialist. In her educational presentation titled "Wildlife We Live With", she included and covered coyotes and scientific findings related to coyotes and unintended outcomes (increased birth rates and populations) when coyotes are culled. Based on scientific findings, it appears killing coyotes has the opposite and undesired effect. Rather than reducing their numbers, their numbers increase. Based on that information alone, clearly coyote-killing contests should be banned and end.

I also just learned online that eight other states have instituted coyote-killing contest bans, but Oregon has yet to do so. In light of scientific findings, it is hoped the ODFW Commission will follow the science as well, and will now do the same.

Thank you for this opportunity to share my support to bring an end to coyote-killing contests in Oregon.

Re: Support Coalition Petition to Prohibit Coyote Killing Contests

Dear Chair Mary Wahl and Commissioners:

As state lawmakers who value all of Oregon's wildlife, we are writing in support of the wildlife petition before your agency to prohibit coyote killing contests in Oregon.

Oregon's wildlife is managed for the enjoyment and benefit of all its citizens, both present and future. Thus, we can all appreciate Oregon's strong hunting tradition without supporting practices that waste wildlife. Coyote killing contests violate the spirit and tenets of responsible stewardship, sportsmanship, and respect for the public's wildlife.

More than 1,000 coyotes have been killed in these contests in Oregon over the last four years, and more than 10 such contests have been held in Oregon during this time. These contests offer cash prizes and/or guns for the winner who kills the most, the largest, or the smallest coyotes over one or two days.

Coyote killing contests are also not supported by modern, science-based wildlife management principles. Numerous research studies, including those recently cited in Oregon Small Farm News, an extension of Oregon State University, underscore that the indiscriminate, mass killing of coyotes is not an effective means of reducing conflicts with livestock or pets, or increasing numbers of game species.

Contests that incentivize the indiscriminate killing of large numbers of animals are deeply at odds with the conservation values of Oregonians, in both urban and rural areas. In fact, a recent poll by the Remington Research Group underscores those values with a strong majority of Oregonians across all five Congressional districts supporting legislation to ban coyote killing contests.

Oregon's wildlife belongs to all its citizens, and to allow wanton waste of a wildlife species as part of a contest is an abdication of the state's responsibility to protect the public's wildlife. To that end, we encourage you to approve the wildlife petition to ban coyote killing contests in Oregon. This is an issue that aligns well within the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission's mission to protect and conserve the state's wildlife for present and future generations.

Please end the legacy of the US government's predator control programs, and stop coyote killing contests in Oregon. Wolves were eliminated first, and then coyotes became demonized. Removing predators from ecosystems is unsound scientifically, as wolf reintroduction has demonstrated. Coyotes are smart, resilient and adaptable, and despite decades of government sanctioned killing, they have expanded their ranges. They also have a neat trick of having much larger litters when their local population density is low. The result is that killing them to control their numbers is simply ineffective. The coyotes in my suburban Portland neighborhood undoubtedly keep our rats and mice populations under control, and in rural areas their impact on agriculture/ranching is insignificant. Stop these contests please.

It is simply time for our state to put an end to these contests, as they are inhumane and operate against all sensible views of hunting and predator management.

I was raised in western South Dakota, so I am no stranger to ranching and the overall hunting mentality. Animal killing contests have nothing to do with true sportsmanship, with responsible hunting of game animals, or with livestock protection. It is simply a long-outdated mode of thought and action, and Oregon really has no need for such a practice. I urge ODFW to ban coyote killing contests statewide.

Good morning Commissioners,

I am writing to weigh in on the petition to ban coyote calling contests and ask that you not follow the advice of the petition. The petition presents some valid and accurate points: these contests do not cause significant impacts on coyote populations long-term, and there is no concrete evidence that an increase in game populations follows the contests. The why for this is important, though- coyote contests are not typically successful enough at harvesting coyotes to cause populations to decline, and coyotes move freely to occupy open territory if a population does decline.

And yes, misperception of coyote contests can damage the reputation of hunters like me, particularly if they are a vehicle for a country to profit off the contest. Should any entity be making money from a coyote contest? No, it sends the wrong message. Should coyote calling contests be better regulated to ensure they are addressing an identified ecological or agricultural problem caused by high predator populations? Probably, but a ban on these contests definitely isn't the right answer here.

This petition is not grounded in sound wildlife science and represents a litany of animal rights grievances and misperceptions. Please deny this petition in favor of science-based wildlife management and the retention of traditional hunting practices.

Sincerely,

David Tetrick

Subject: Coyote Killing Extravaganzas

Dear ODFW Commission,

Please accept the petition and move forward with rule-making to prohibit the indiscriminate coyote killing contests in Oregon.

Studies have found that large-scale coyote killing contests are not an effective tool for minimizing livestock conflict and in fact, actually increase reproduction rates in coyotes. Do the celebrants who partake in these state-sanctioned death events actually want to exert effective population control? Because if they did, they wouldn't do these events.

Furthermore, recent polling by the Remington Research Group revealed that a majority of Oregonians from all across the state support policies that put an end to these contests once and for all.

How can this still be going on? Are our children going to thank the state of Oregon for continuing a long bloody history of extermination as policy in the west? Are they going to say, We're so glad that community building around coyote shoots is still going strong? No, they are going to despair that in the face of science and ethics, such a practice continued for so long.

It's past time for Oregon to join the eight other states, including five from the West, that have already banned them. Please accept this petition today.

Thank you,

Sincerely,

Mr. Adam Crane

Dear Chair Wahl and Commission members:

I am a co-founder of and advisor to the Benton County Agriculture and Wildlife Protection Program (AWPP). This county taxpayer-funded program provides grant funds to farmers for the purchase of non-lethal wildlife deterrents to proactively protect livestock from predators. I am writing to ask you to support the petition to prohibit coyote killing contests in Oregon.

One reason the AWPP non-lethal deterrents grant program was created was because even though USDA Wildlife Services kills many coyotes and other predators in the county every year, farmers continued to experience unacceptable livestock losses.

During the development of the Benton County grant program, we consulted with predation management scientists and wildlife ecologists from around the United States. We also interviewed many local farmers and have spoken with dozens more from all over Oregon at the annual Oregon State University Small Farms Conference.

While supporters argue that coyote killing contests help farmers by reducing livestock depredations, scientists and farmers we've spoken with have told us that randomly killing coyotes over large areas does little or nothing to reduce livestock losses.

What's worse, scientists and farmers say that randomly killing coyotes can actually increase the killing of livestock.

A USDA-funded study (Conner et al. 1998) found that killing coyotes does not reduce sheep losses over the long term. The main reason for this is the well-known scientific fact that coyotes compensate for reductions in population with increasing immigration, reproduction, and pup survival rates.

In a New York Times article, University of Washington wildlife scientist Laura Prugh explained, "Killing coyotes is kind of like mowing the lawn, it stimulates vigorous new growth."

Even coyote trappers have an old saying: "If you kill one coyote, two will come to its funeral."

Another key USDA study (Blejwas et al. 2002) of 66 radio-collared coyotes – coyotes whose locations could be followed – revealed that coyotes that are killed to protect sheep are quickly replaced by nearby coyotes.

Scientists and trappers are not the only ones who have observed that killing coyotes may increase livestock losses. Farmer Michelle Canfield wrote the following story about coyotes in her blog after visiting Jon Carter at his farm in Scio, Oregon:

The more selection pressure they face, the more they rise to the challenge and increase reproduction. So the last thing we want to do is go on a killing spree; because the population responds exactly opposite to what we'd prefer. We kill one coyote, we might get three more vying for his spot in return. Indeed, this notion was confirmed by a man I met who ran guardian dogs with his sheep, and generally left well-behaved coyotes alone.

Jon discussed a bit on living in balance with coyotes, and how he used to feel tempted to shoot any coyote he saw. Until one day he shot a coyote in the distance that was minding its own business, during a period of time when he'd had almost zero sheep losses to predators. Lo and behold, the next few weeks, he started getting "hits" from a new coyote who had moved in to fill the now-dead coyote's niche. It convinced Jon to focus on only removing known problem coyotes, not all coyotes!

If a pair of coyotes is not killing livestock, their dominance over the territory typically excludes sheep-killing coyotes and helps to prevent livestock losses (Shivik et al. 2003). Protecting breeding pairs of “well-behaved” coyotes is one of the best reasons for not indiscriminately killing coyotes during contests.

The timing of coyote killing contests could not be worse for livestock producers. Contests are often held a month or two before coyote breeding season (coyotes mate in February give birth about two months later) allowing sufficient time for new breeding pairs to become established.

In contest areas where coyote populations have been reduced, pup survival rates into summer can be two to three times higher than normal. In order to sustain larger numbers of pups, new breeding adults are often compelled to seek larger prey like unprotected sheep and goats, rather than mice and rabbits.

While killing contest sponsors and outfitters may benefit economically from these contests, it is livestock producers in killing contest areas who will bear the negative economic impact of increasing livestock losses months or even a year after the killing contests have ended.

Scientists and farmers have made it abundantly clear that coyote killing contests will only increase conflict between livestock and coyotes. If you really want to help ranchers, I urge you to prohibit coyote killing contests in Oregon.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Respectfully,

Randy Comeleo

Dear Chair Mary Wahl and Commissioners:

I strongly urge you to approve the petition to prohibit coyote killing contests in Oregon.

Proponents of coyote killing contests often portray any attempt to end them as an infringement of their right to hunt. But the truth is, no ethical, responsible, hunter would use the term "hunting" to describe these barbaric contests that turn hunting into a sadistic game.

Proponents of coyote killing contests also claim that killing large numbers of coyotes for cash and/or prizes is a valid wildlife management tool that helps ranchers by reducing conflicts with livestock and helps hunters by increasing game species. But the truth is, scientific research shows that indiscriminate, mass killing of coyotes is NOT an effective means of reducing conflicts OR increasing game species.

Proponents of coyote killing contests say that prohibiting them will allow the coyote population to grow unchecked in Oregon. But the truth is, significant numbers of coyotes will still die after these contests are banned. Coyotes will not be a protected or regulated species in Oregon. They will still be trapped in leg-hold traps and shot from helicopters by USDA APHIS Wildlife Services. They will still be shot on sight by anyone at any time as vermin. And they will still be trapped for their fur. The only thing the approval of this petition will do is stop the blood sport of killing coyotes as part of organized contests to win cash and/or prizes.

Former Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission Chair, Michael Finley, had this to say about coyote killing contests in a 2021 guest opinion in the Mail Tribune (Time to End Coyote Killing Contests):

"They're also a stain on Oregon's outdoors heritage, and cast our state's sportsmen and sportswomen in a bad light. While our hunting community plays a key role in conserving Oregon's wildlife, the fact is that killing contests have nothing to do with responsible hunting. If we want to preserve that hunting heritage for the sake of future generations, we must be mindful of how our activities are perceived by the vast majority of our state's citizens who do not hunt. The sight of contest participants grinning for photos next to piles of bloodied, dead animals is sure to turn more Oregonians against all hunting."

An undercover video of a December 2018 coyote killing contest in Burns shows the type of behavior Mr. Finley is referring to in his statement.

Approving the petition to prohibit coyote killing contests will not only end a cruel, senseless, practice that does nothing to reduce conflicts or increase game species, it is critical to ensure the non-hunting public continues to support hunting.

Please accept the petition to prohibit coyote killing contests in Oregon and initiate rule making proceedings.

Thank you kindly for considering my comments.

RE: SUPPORT for Petition to Promulgate Rule to Prohibit Coyote Killing Contests in Oregon

Contrary to statement made by some non-scientists, the use of coyote killing contests for predator control in Oregon is ineffective for reducing predation on livestock and game species. The science is unequivocal.

I quote from Oregon Small Farm News, Spring 2018, Using Coyotes to Protect Livestock, Oregon State University Extension Service. "Surprisingly, these researchers found that as more predators are killed, more livestock are killed". "killing coyotes is kind of like mowing the lawn, it stimulates vigorous new growth" via increased reproduction and immigration." "well behaved coyotes can actually prevent livestock losses by defending a territory that may include sheep".

John Shivik, USDA Wildlife Services Scientist ,the nation's preeminent researcher on coyote control reported that non-lethal control is much more effective than killing coyotes (Shivik J.A., A Treves, P. Callahan. 2003 Non-lethal techniques for managing predation: primary and secondary repellents. Conservation Biology , 17:1531-37. In his book: The predator paradox, ending the war with wolves, bears, cougars, and coyotes, 2014. Beacon Press, Shivik states "the cost of broad predator control did not provide a return on investment in the form of more deer. No actual increase in deer populations occurs". "Coyote control preferentially removed the "good" coyotes, but left the repeat offenders" in livestock depredations. Basically, killing resident coyotes simply results in an influx of even more new coyotes - to quickly take their place, and the new predators are often more likely to prey on livestock.

Ekland et al. 2017 reviewed the scientific literature from 1990 to 2016. I quote " unselective predator removal may reduce livestock losses unless the removed individuals are instantly replaced or represent part of the population that does not kill livestock. In this case predator removal may be completely inefficient". A. Ekland. J.V. Lopez-Bao. 2017. Limited evidence on effectiveness of interventions to reduce livestock predation by large carnivores. Scientific Reports 7, Article number 2097. .state that

Megan Draheim said in Scientific American , May 2017. "why would predation increase after predators are killed? When pack animals such as coyotes are killed, the social structure breaks down. Packs protect territories, so breaking up a pack allows new animals to come in".

Kilgo et al. 2017. said both " immigration and reproduction increase after killing- rendering lethal control ineffective". Reproductive characteristics of a coyote population before and during exploitation. Journal of Wildlife Management, 2017, 81(8): 1386-1393.

In summary, the vast majority of scientific studies have concluded that mass killing of coyotes, such as in killing contests, are not effective in reducing predation on either livestock or game animals.

Dr. Wielgus is former (retired) Professor of Wildlife Ecology and Director of the Large Carnivore Conservation Lab at Washington State University. He obtained his Ph.D. at the University of British Columbia, MS at University of Idaho, and BS at Brandon University.

He has studied large predators their interactions with humans, prey, and livestock for over 35 years. He has published over 35 peer reviewed scientific papers on predator/human interactions and is an internationally recognized expert in his field.

Dear ODFW Commission,

I have been an Oregon resident and avid hunter for nearly 50 years. I have also occasionally hunted coyotes myself, but only in conjunction with a small grouse hunt for some kind of big game.

I also own and live on a few acres of semi-rural land, which has a healthy coyote population such that they're frequently seen (and much more frequently heard).

Despite those facts, I am glad to hear you are reconsidering antiquated coyote killing contests in Oregon. I strongly urge you to please accept the petition and move forward with rulemaking to prohibit these indiscriminate killing contests in the state.

Dear ODFW Commission,

Earlier this fall, Humane Society of the United State and wildlife conservation partners in Oregon submitted a petition to the Commission calling on them to do what a small group of legislators, in service to anti-wildlife special interests, have blocked passage of in years past. However, the Commission has the power to do what the legislature has not been able to manage and end these depraved killing carnivals once and for all. On December 16th, the Commission will decide whether to accept the petition and move forward with formal rulemaking or deny the petition outright. We need your help to make sure they take the necessary steps to ban these outlandish coyote killing carnivals.

According to a recent poll by the Remington Research Group, a majority of Oregonians from all across the state agree: incentivizing people to indiscriminately kill coyotes is wasteful, unethical and should be banned.

Please give coyotes some protection.

Thank you for reconsidering antiquated coyote killing contests in Oregon. I strongly urge you to please accept the petition and move forward with rulemaking to prohibit these indiscriminate killing contests in the state.

Studies have found that large-scale coyote killing contests are not an effective tool for minimizing livestock conflict and in fact, actually increase reproduction rates in coyotes. Furthermore, recent polling by the Remington Research Group revealed that a majority of Oregonians from all across the state support policies that put an end to these contests once and for all.

It's time for Oregon to join the eight other states, including five from the West, that have already banned them. Please accept this petition today.

Dear ODFW Commission,

TO the ODFW Commission:

I'm a relatively new Oregonian having become a new resident in 2019. Until then, I had been a resident of Illinois my entire life. And a major component of my hunting family back in IL was coyote hunting. We are a family of houndsman who hunt coyotes with the use of hunting hounds that track and push the coyotes out into open country. Sometimes, they even catch the coyote. Usually, if the coyote avoids the hunters positioned around the hunting area, it lives to run another day. This is what makes this a sport. The coyote has a good chance to outwit (they often do) both the hounds and the hunters. And isn't that what sport is about? Both sides, hunter and prey have a chance to outwit the other. Unfortunately, the coyote killing contests in Oregon, which you are reconsidering, are the farthest thing from sport. Running coyotes down with ATVs to shoot them at close range. Trying to take as many as possible in a contested time period. This isn't hunting. It's simply killing. And it's the furthest thing from giving your prey a sporting chance.

As many others have stated, thank you for reconsidering antiquated coyote killing contests in Oregon. I strongly urge you to please accept the petition and move forward with rulemaking to prohibit these indiscriminate killing contests in the state.

Don't be pressured by the new age liberal viewpoint. Oregon is not California and should strive to avoid the California set of ideals. Talk to the hardworking men and women who work the land and enjoy Oregon's many recreation opportunities.

Subject: Ban Coyote Killing Contests Now

Dear ODFW Commission,

Hello,

Recently I earned a degree in ecology and evolutionary biology. The reason I pursued this field of study is my long held passion and curiosity for the natural world- something I wish I felt more like policy makers shared. As members of the ODFW commission, I am sincerely hopeful that you do share this wonder and that you are willing to hear me out.

The ethics are already very clearly in favor of banning the killing of animals for nothing but sport and hatred, and therefore I will not talk too much about the ethics. If anyone has made the same argument to you that I'm making, then you've surely heard it before.

Instead, I would like to remind you what happens to populations of animals facing the kind of stress that events like hunting contests and extermination campaigns: the survivors compensate for the losses by reproducing more. Coyotes are one of the species this has been commonly observed in, and if the reason for the killing is to reduce the number of "pest" animals, the problems caused by coyotes can actually worsen as the population swells in following years to compensate for the increased mortality. There are other, more sensible ways to prevent conflict with wily Canis latrans, and that means there is no legitimate reason to allow folks to gun down as many as they can.

Thank you for taking the time to read this. For concision, I left out all that I could have said about coyotes as the unique, adaptable, admirable rascals they are, and their inherent worth as fellow organisms. Again, I am keenly hopeful that you will make the right decision and prohibit the wasteful, cruel, tragic, pointless practice of coyote killing contests.

Sincerely,

People complain about coyotes killing livestock. As with wolves, when researched you will find that more livestock die from illness than attacks from predators like coyotes. Actually coyotes are helping to keep an ecological balance in their range by controlling rabbits, moles, voles, etc. Besides, killing of some coyotes only opens the range for more packs to form.

Dear Commissioners,

I urge you to accept the petition submitted by Oregon wildlife conservation organizations to ban coyote killing contests.

There is no scientific evidence to support the idea that indiscriminately killing coyotes reduces their population, thus protecting deer or livestock. In fact, coyotes tend to reproduce more quickly when their numbers are low. Utilizing humane, non-lethal methods is far more effective.

In the last four years, at least 1000 coyotes have been brutally killed by coyote-killing contests across Oregon. To me, this is atrocious and needs to be end.

Citizens of Oregon, for the most part, do not condone these killing contests. A recent poll by Remington Research Group found a strong majority in all five congressional districts support public policy to ban these contests. Eight states have prohibited these contests and several more are considering bans.

This is not a ban on hunting. It simply ends an outdated, indiscriminate, and brutal practice.

Please do not allow this to continue. Vote to ban coyote killing contests in Oregon.

- There is no scientific evidence that indiscriminately killing coyotes reduces their populations, protects livestock or increases populations of “game” animals like deer. Randomly killing coyotes disrupts their pack structure, which can increase their populations and increase conflicts between coyotes, humans, and domestic animals. Preventing conflicts by utilizing humane, non-lethal solutions is more effective.
- In the last four years, at least 1,000 coyotes have been indiscriminately and brutally killed in coyote-killing contests across Oregon.
- A recent poll by the Remington Research Group found that a strong majority of Oregonians, in all five congressional districts, support public policy to ban coyote killing contests.
- Coyotes targeted by killing contests play an important ecological role in healthy ecosystems. For example, coyotes reduce rabbit and rodent populations, scavenge animal carcasses and increase biodiversity. These contests disregard ecological health and sound management.
- Eight states have prohibited wildlife killing contests and several more are considering bans. As awareness of these barbaric events spreads, Americans are increasingly demanding an end to this bloodsport.
- Killing contests are a bloodsport. Killing coyotes for thrills and prizes—with no respect for their intrinsic or ecological value—personifies senseless violence and wanton waste.
- Oregon’s wildlife is managed in trust for all Oregonians. Allowing individuals to wantonly kill wildlife as part of a cruel bloodsport is a grave violation of the state’s obligations to hold wildlife as a public trust for all citizens.
- Please ban these cruel contests!

Dear ODFW Commission,

I absolutely support banning coyote killing contests! Please accept the petition for banning this terrible "sport".

This indiscriminate killing is inhumane, cruel and not ecologically-based. It is ecologically destructive. When are we going to learn and understand that coyotes and other predators play an important ecological role in healthy ecosystems? I feel like we know this already! At least many of us who have worked in science and worked on natural resource teams. Coyotes, as well as other predators, play an important role in healthy ecosystems.

Oregon wildlife also belongs to me. I am a Botanist and nature photographer and I have every right to see and enjoy coyotes - as many rights as bloodsport-killing hunters. I have found, during my career, that ODFW is driven by satisfying hunters. But I cannot believe that you would allow sport killing contests.

I lived in Wyoming where we had abundant wildlife and organizations worked together to educate the the public about how to live with wildlife so that wildlife lives. We need a new paradigm in Oregon.

Please respond letting me know you received my comments. And please have someone email me with ODFW's final decision AND who, within your organization, is working on promoting public education about living in harmony with wildlife where wildlife wins and doesn't lose if they cross boundaries into private property. I would like to meet with this person.

Thank you for considering my comments and getting back to me with the above information. I look forward to hearing from you.

There are no rules except bring as many coyote bodies back as possible. Some times there's a prize for the most, total weight, the largest, or the smallest. They will kill a lactating female causing the pups to die. Or actually go into a den to kill the pups. It is a blood sport. It doesn't teach sportsmanship, put food on the table or eliminate livestock or wild game conflict. It is a wanton waste of our wildlife and does not stop or ban ethical control of coyotes.

Dear ODFW Commissioners,

With this email I urge you to accept the proposed wildlife petition in December to prohibit all coyote killing contests in Oregon.

In these contests, participants compete for cash and prizes to kill as many coyotes as possible--indiscriminate of any damage caused by the animal. This contest is not hunting and not necessary or relevant to ODFW's wildlife management goals.

Let me start by saying that my husband, my daughter and many of our friends are hunters. All of them would never consider this contest hunting or done in the respectful spirit of hunting. They believe it is an unnecessary cruelty to an animal that has great value. This wasteful killing destroys 1) a beautiful animal 2) a native animal 3) a useful animal who helps keep down the ground squirrel population on our farm 4) an animal which tourists and visitors to our area enjoy seeing and hearing at night. Coyote is unique to North America. Why would we want to destroy what is native to our homeland?

These contests come out of an antiquated attitude toward coyotes that is out of touch with science and the majority interests of the current public who, in polls and research show, prefer viewing wildlife.

This petition does not stop any rancher from killing a coyote that they believe will cause damage to their livestock. We live in a rural area of Oregon. We have lived here for 42 years. We have many friends and acquaintances who are commercial ranchers. We buy our meats directly from them. We know of no one who supports this grotesque, irreverent, antiquated, wasteful and cruel contest.

Also, my husband is a retired wildlife biologist. I've heard him and every one of his colleagues express disgust at these contests. I've listened to current ODFW biologists state that these contests do not serve any wildlife management objectives.

As I understand, there is only one contest in all of Oregon. Like our western neighbors, Washington, New Mexico, Arizona, California and Colorado, we need to get ban this destructive and cruel remnant of an out dated attitude.

Please do the right and respectful thing and support the proposed petition to prohibit all coyote killing contests in Oregon.

To The Oregon Department of Fish & Wildlife Commission:

Dear Commissioners:

Wildlife killing contests are a stain on sound wildlife management practices and operate under unscientific justifications. Killing native wildlife for sport and cheap thrills is ethically and morally reprehensible, and indefensible as an approach to engaging with the natural world. Killing native wildlife is cruel and barbaric and should not be tolerated in a civilized society.

Thousands of coyotes have been needlessly and recklessly killed in "contests" across Oregon over the years with no justification other than "sport". State-sponsored reward programs are inappropriate and further legitimize and incentivize indiscriminate killing. Recent polling conducted by the Remington Research Group shows that a majority of Oregon residents across the state are opposed to coyote killing "contests" and support a ban on the practice. Killing coyotes does not protect livestock nor does it increase game animal populations. Disrupting pack structures is inhumane and counterproductive to stated ODFW management goals. Lethal control of predators has no scientific basis. Oregon's native wildlife belongs to all of us and should be protected from those who think needlessly killing wildlife is "sport". Coyote killing contests harm the reputation of ethical subsistence hunters and threaten traditional cultural and subsistence practices. We are better than this! Eight states have already banned wildlife killing contests due to their cruel nature and we pray that you will add Oregon to their ranks.

Please join us, and the majority of Oregon citizens, by rededicating our public Fish & Wildlife Commission to an ethical, and scientifically defensible, approach to our relationship with, and stewardship of, what remains of our great state's native wildlife populations.

Thank you for your consideration of our views in your deliberations.

I am writing today on behalf of certain of Oregon's wildlife, specifically coyotes and foxes. It is simply APPALLING that our state continues to allow coyote killing contests. They are nothing short of cruel and unethical bloodsport - the killing of wildlife for sport and prizes. Our neighboring states of Washington and California have already outlawed these barbaric contests, as have many other states - because MOST Americans value all wildlife, and disapprove of these contests. Besides being cruel and unethical - they are ineffective at controlling coyote populations, or "protecting" other species (notably species that are hunted, like deer and elk).

I am URGING the ODFW to vote YES - to protect ALL our wildlife by banning coyote killing contests in Oregon.

I write to urge the Commission to accept the proposed wildlife petition to prohibit wasteful, cruel and irresponsible coyote killing contests, in which participants compete for cash and prizes to indiscriminately mass kill as many coyotes as possible over a few days. I find this both disgusting and unethical. Offering a financial reward for killing Oregon's native wildlife is grossly out of step with the principle of fair chase, modern, science-based wildlife management, and Oregon's conservation centered values. Oregon's wildlife belongs to all its citizens and allowing a small group of individuals to engage in wanton waste of a wildlife species as part of a contest is an abdication of the state's solemn duty to protect the public's wildlife, which are held and managed for the benefit and enjoyment of all Oregonians.

If my understanding of "best available science" is correct, this type of indiscriminate, large scale killing of coyotes as an effective means of minimizing conflicts with pets or livestock or increasing numbers of game species is wholly ineffective. Further, it likely leads to an increase in coyote numbers by disrupting stable family packs and increasing their rate of reproduction.

I understand that a recent poll by the Remington Research Group found that a strong majority of Oregonians, in all five congressional districts, support public policy to ban coyote killing contests. Subject: Comment on Oregon coyote killing contests

To the ODFW Commissioners:

Over the last decade I have submitted comments asking for a ban on coyote killing contests in Oregon. I have written to state and federal agencies, submitted for publication LTEs to newspapers, and sent comments to private landowners sponsoring these killing events. I presented my arguments from a scientific standpoint because this is what my professional career as a veterinarian guided me to do. These comments basically supported what indiscriminate killing of coyotes will not do....it does not stop livestock predation, does not increase populations of game animals, and primarily does not reduce coyote populations as those participants would lead one to believe. Apparently scientific evidence seems to not have had much effect on ODFW commissioners' decisions on the ban in the past. Perhaps there has been enough pressure from livestock industry and hunting lobbyists on prior commissioners to continue allowing the killing of 1000 coyotes in Oregon from these unethical hunts.

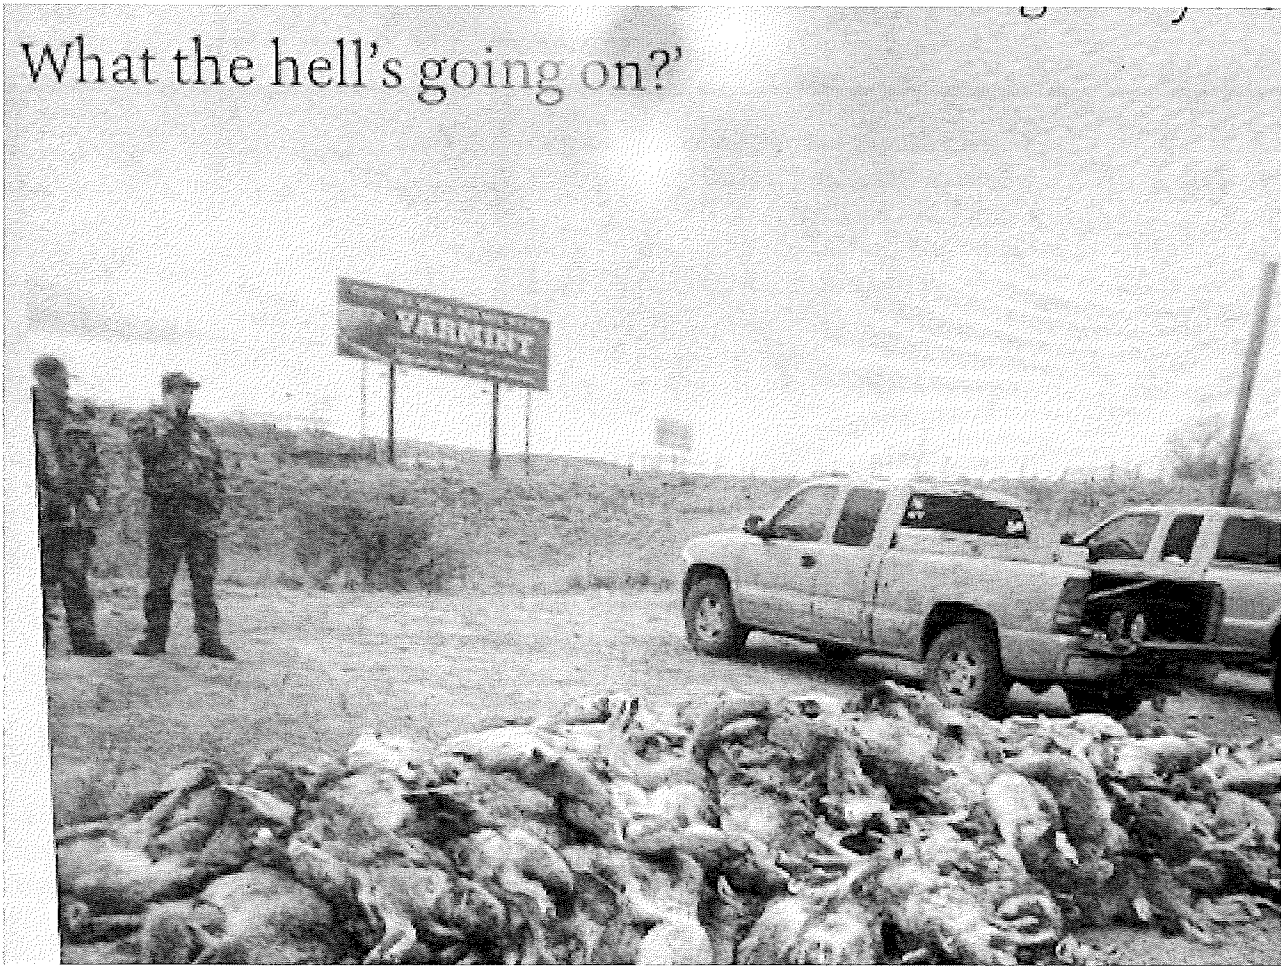

Instead of referring to scientific research from multiple wildlife biologists such as Rick Hopkins PhD, John Laundre, PhD, and Rob Wielgus PhD, whose results concurred on what indiscriminate killing of wildlife carnivore predators does, I will instead address the lack of ethics of this blood sport. I am not a hunter, but I can respect the ethical hunter who would never participate in this type of violation of fundamental hunting ethics. Eight states have already prohibited these killing contests for prizes and money. Oregon is 1000 coyote deaths past time in joining these states.

How many animals are injured or orphaned from these killing contests? How many packs have had their social structure break apart? Non-target species are also at risk, including endangered and ESA protected wolves, from those who cannot tell the difference between a coyote and a wolf during a killing spree. Decades of my life as a veterinarian were devoted to respecting and protecting animal life from harm. I cannot even fathom anyone who could derive pleasure and thrill out of mass killing of coyotes solely for money or prizes. This complete lack of respect for wildlife shows no regard for the intrinsic and ecological value of that life. Intrinsic value defines an animal's life as one that matters beyond any resource value. In other words, this animal has its own right to exist as a sentient being. Killing a coyote just for passing through its habitat, going about its daily life, or being enticed in by contest participants using calls mimicking injured prey, portrays only a senseless violence which ends as a wanton waste of life. It also shows the participant's complete disregard for other wildlife secondarily affected after the dumping or disposal of hundreds of carcasses on which scavenger species may feed. These scavengers may often be exposed to lead poisoning by ingestion of the lead bullets left inside the carcasses. Species like bald eagles are found now to be ingesting high enough levels of lead from secondary poisoning to affect their health and threaten their lives. I can guarantee that any one of the ODFW commissioners witnessing a lead poisoned animal would think it distressing and horrifying.

As commissioners who should be upholding your obligation to treat our wildlife as a public trust, then this Board must finally make the moral, ethical decision to ban an atrocious practice which has no place in our modern era. Non-lethal management and coexistence is what the public wants. Now it is up to you to make this happen. Hopefully then we will never again have to witness what the photograph below depicts.

Sincerely,

RE: Adoption of Coalition Petition to Prohibit Coyote Killing Contests in Oregon

Dear Commissioners:

The Animal Legal Defense Fund (ALDF) has been working for more than four decades to protect the lives and advance the interests of animals through the legal system, including support for the protection of animals that are involved in wildlife killing contests. On behalf of the Animal Legal Defense Fund, and our members in Oregon, we want to convey our support for the adoption of the coalition petition to prohibit coyote killing contests in Oregon.

The proposed regulation would create a new Division 61 under Chapter 635 of the Oregon Administrative Rules. The proposed regulation states that "It is unlawful to conduct or participate in a contest, competition, tournament, or derby that has the objective of taking a coyote or coyotes for cash or prizes."

Coyote killing contests refer to cruel, gruesome events or tournaments where participants compete to kill as many coyotes as possible during a specified time period. Cash and other prizes are awarded to those who kill the most animals or the largest or smallest animal. More than 1,000 coyotes have been killed in these contests in Oregon in recent years. The purported goal of these events is often to reduce the population of native wildlife species in order to protect ranching interests. However, killing contests are not supported by science-based wildlife management principles. The indiscriminate killing of a species does not reduce the overall population. Studies have shown that indiscriminate killing of coyotes actually increases their populations by disrupting their social structure, which encourages higher levels of breeding and migration.

Oregon's wildlife belongs to all Oregonians. Allowing a small group of individuals to engage in financially motivated wanton waste of a wildlife species is an abdication of the state's solemn duty to protect wildlife, which are held and managed for the enjoyment and benefit of all Oregonians. Further, coyote killing contests are grossly incompatible with Oregon's conservation centered values. A recent bipartisan poll found that a strong majority of Oregonians, across the state, support public policy to ban coyote killing contests. Eight states, including five in the west, have already banned coyote killing contests, primarily through their state wildlife commissions.

For these reasons, the Animal Legal Defense Fund urges you to adopt the coalition petition to prohibit coyote killing contests in Oregon, which is squarely within your authority and promulgates Oregon's codified wildlife values. We also would be happy to discuss these issues and answer any questions you may have regarding the proposed regulation if it would better inform your decision.

Subject: Proposed Wildlife Petition

Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission:

I highly encourage your commission to accept the proposed petition to prohibit cruel and irresponsible coyote killing contests. It is extremely disturbing and discouraging to hear that this is something that your commission would even consider endorsing. If any wildlife in Oregon need to be killed because of a danger to our citizens or state, please consider a humane method. In no way does a contest for humans to kill wildlife for cash and prizes sound rational or justifiable. I urge your group to vote no on this proposal! Kathy Lillis, 3216 N.E. Subject: Ban coyote killing contests

I'm writing to ask that coyote killing contests be banned in Oregon.

There is no scientific evidence that indiscriminately killing coyotes reduces their populations, protects livestock or increases populations of "game" animals like deer. Randomly killing coyotes disrupts their pack structure, which can increase their populations and increase conflicts between coyotes, humans, and domestic animals. Preventing conflicts by utilizing humane, non-lethal solutions is more effective.

Coyotes play an important role in healthy ecosystems. They reduce rabbit and rodent populations, scavenge animal carcasses and increase biodiversity. These contests disregard ecological health and sound management.

Killing contests damage the reputation of responsible hunters by violating fundamental hunting ethics. Countless animals are injured or orphaned during killing contests. The events also put non-target species at risk.

Killing contests are a bloodsport. Killing coyotes for thrills and prizes—with no respect for their intrinsic or ecological value—personifies senseless violence and wanton waste.

This petition is not a ban on hunting and does not impact other laws. Individuals will still be allowed to hunt coyotes and other wildlife according to state laws.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

Subject: Coyote killing contests in Oregon

I cannot believe that the state I was born and raised in is allowing killing contests of innocent creatures!!! I have always thought of Oregon as a state that was fair-minded and forward thinking. However, allowing coyotes to be killed, in a killing contest no less shows how wrong I was in my thinking. What creature(s) will be next? Which creature will threaten someone else's way of life and therefore become the next "contest?" I am struggling to understand the need for my letter to demand this inhumane, destructive, malicious killing stop. I am confused as to why this killing contest is being allowed to take place. However, I am writing this letter and I am demanding that you put a stop to this senseless, callous killing!!!

Sincerely, disgusted, and angry,

Sharon Adams

To those who have the power to stop this:

As an Oregon voter who would like to be proud of this state, I can only say that any kind of "killing contests" should be stopped immediately. What a black mark for us. It's disgusting and makes me sick to my stomach. There is no need for killers to balance nature with a sporting event. I hope to see a ballot measure on this if action is not taken by Oregon Fish and Wildlife.

Grow up Oregon, you're losing any luster you may have had for me.

This is a horrifying activity that serves no purpose, and I am appalled to know that it is still allowed in Oregon. As an Oregon resident, I am urging you to do as Washington, California and other states have already done and put an end to inhumane coyote killing contests in our state."

I'm a long time Oregon resident. And at age 83, I am appalled and outraged that the State of Oregon and ODFW still allows these barbaric killing contests.

Eight western states have stopped these contests. Oregon needs to stop coyote and bear killing contests too.

To Whom it concerns:

As an Oregon citizen, I am asking you folks to reconsider your wildlife killing contests, which I find horrific. This is such a waste of life and time. These animals want to live just as much as you and I. Please consider what you're doing. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Hello,

Eight U.S. states have already banned killing contests, including Oregon's neighbors Washington and California, and other western states like Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado. It's time for Oregon to do the same.

As an Oregon resident, I am urging you to put an end to inhumane coyote killing contests in our state.

Thank you,
